Wanted—News Items

GASOLINE rationing, manpower shortages, and other factors have added many difficulties to the job of collecting news.

For that reason a newspaper in the position of the News-Review, trying to carry the greatest possible amount of worthwhile local news, is frequently unable to establish all the contacts it would like to make.

Perhaps you hesitate because you don't know how to write a news item. Please don't let such hesitancy stand in the way.

When Joe Doakes gets settled down at home after a day's work, after he has assembled all sections of the Daily Astonisher and dumped the cat out of his chair, he wants the day's war news, and then the low-down on last night's hockey game.

When you write a story, take time enough to make it short. You can write a 3-page article in a half-hour. It might take an hour longer to boil it down to one.

Always permit your name, or the name of someone in your organization, to be used as authority for your story. No published statement is anonymous.

Double space your copy to save paper, your story filed with the janitor is wasted. Leave a inches of headline space at the top, thus saving the editor's time, paste, paper and patience.

Don't get the idea that your organization has to make the headlines every day or every week. If you're doing nothing, why let the editor know it by sending him a story about nothing?

Double space your copy to save paper, your story filed with the janitor is wasted. Leave a inches of headline space at the top, thus saving the editor's time, paste, paper and patience.

the wastepaper industry. If he gets in the habit of throwing away stories about mice, he may not read the one you send him some day about a two-tailed elephant.

Don't use a shotgun when you want to center the target. Know what you want to say and say the best things first. Maybe the editor at the copy desk or the editor-in-chief in the easy chair at home will read only part of your stuff.

He starts reading from the top. Don't, for gosh sakes, ramble and wander all around the subject as we're doing with this.

HE and his bandit crew can be saved only by a German victory. There can be no German victory if the German people crack as they did in 1918.

So, with fear gnawing at his vitals, he tells them (in effect): "You're rats in a corner. Everybody hates you. If you lose, you'll be slaughtered or enslaved. You've got to FIGHT OR DIE!"

HARPING on this string, he paints Russia as a diabolically clever ogre, scheming from the beginning to crush Germany. He says the Russian war on Finland was just clever camouflage designed to trap Germany into the belief that Russia was silly and weak—shouts that Russia fought the Finns with obsolete arms just to give that idea.

Then he adds: "But while the Russians were fighting the Finns with obsolete arms (to fool the Germans) they had spent the last decade and a half building up the most powerful armaments WHICH HAD EVER BEEN MADE BY ANY NATION."

At this point a thought occurs to him. Maybe, in his hearer's minds will arise this question: "Is this fellow Hitler a god after all? If he was so easily trapped by the scheming Russians, perhaps he isn't very smart. Maybe we'd better GET RID OF HIM."

So Goering adds: "But the strength of Russia was KNOWN. The fuchrer's INTUITION warned him that we must attack all the same."

HE dares not, you see, permit any doubt of Hitler to arise in the German mind. For Goering and Hitler are in the same boat. If Hitler goes down, GOERING will go down.

And BOTH will go down unless the German people can be fired by fear of the wrath to come to fight to the last drop of their blood.

Understand Goering's speech, with all its implications, you must put yourself in Goering's place. If you are able to do that, you will have no doubt that as he spoke these were his secret thoughts.

We know of no editor who ever needs any news to "help fill up the paper." Chances are the poor guy is sweating his head off trying to crowd 300 column inches of type into a 16-inch form for later use. His stories spoil faster than a can of warm milk. His news space is rightly limited, all ways.

When you write a story, take time enough to make it short. You can write a 3-page article in a half-hour. It might take an hour longer to boil it down to one. But boil it down to one.

Cougars Win 2nd From O. S. C. But Have Close Call

PULLMAN, Wash., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Washington State stands out sharply today as the team to beat for the northern division basketball title after the Cougars' 55-52 conquest of the Oregon State Beavers here last night.

Washington, however, stands prepared to challenge W. S. C's league leadership, and the Husky-Cougar series in Seattle Friday and Saturday will be the closest thing to "crucial" this season has yet seen.

Oregon State left for home after last night's defeat, the defending champions' third in four games on the road trip, and will attempt to salvage something from what so far has been a far from happy season in Friday-Saturday games at Corvallis against the University of Idaho.

Idaho, currently on the upgrade, boasts only one victory however, that over Oregon State. The possible return of Don Durdan to the lineup will do much to spur the Beavers from here on in. Oregon does not go into action again until next Monday and Tuesday, against Idaho at Eugene.

O. S. C. Shows More Pep O. S. C. last night was a far different club than the one that dropped a 44-35 decision to the Cougars the night before. They were definitely in the ball game from start to finish and for a greater part of the game looked as though they had the winning spark.

Except for a brief 6-6 tie the Beavers led throughout the first half, which ended 34-30 in their favor. A fast, hard-charging contest throughout, the game really reached a white heat in the closing minutes of the last half. There were four ties, and six swaps of the lead in the final 10 minutes and not until the final two minutes did the Cougars go ahead to stay, on two quick goals by Gail Bishop after Tom Howard had laid green O. S. at a 50-49 advantage. Bishop, with replating Bishop after his last goal, but he net for the final Cougar field goal and Lew Beck connected from midfloor for the last Beaver tally.

Concerning the NORTHWEST As Viewed at the National Capital By John W. Kelly

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3.—Grand Coulee and Bonneville, the government power producing dams on the Columbia river, have a new boss, J. A. Krug, who tops Paul J. Raver, the official administrator. Mr. Krug, who has never been sympathetic with the government-owned hydro-electric enterprises in the northwest, has been catapulted into power as head of the office of power director. He now occupies in power the same position as Bill Jeffers does in rubber; he is boss, and nothing less, so appointed and authorized by Donald Nelson, chief of war production board.

Appointment of Krug as the boss of all power in the United States does not set well with the Federal power commission, nor with Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the Interior, who has his own plans for gobbling up every kilowatt in the Pacific northwest, especially, and the energy generated in a dozen other areas.

It is quite possible that Director Krug may order (or issue a directive as they call it now) a dim out that will make the present dim out of the Pacific coast look like broad daylight. If the dim out is ordered it will not be for the purpose of backing out the target area and frustrating the enemy, but to conserve electricity. It is rather difficult to determine whether there is or will be a power shortage in 1943. One government agency says there will be more power generated than ever before (especially in the northwest) and another says economy should be practiced to save power. At all events, all outdoor illumination, neon signs, show windows and possibly alternate street lamps may be ordered "out."

Director Krug will give orders to Administrator Raver, to Reclamation Commissioner of John Page and to executives of all the private utilities, telling them what they can and cannot do. He is to say whether any government or private power project can be expanded by authorizing priorities on copper and other materials. Prior to the elevation of Krug, the power branch was directed by Herbert Marks with the title of "acting." Marks served for a time as the general counsel of Bonneville. In the new setup he will be the counsel to Krug.

Nelson Wins Over Ickes Donald Nelson set Secretary Ickes and FFC back upon their heels when he named Krug (formerly with TVA) as director of power. The FFC was ignored after the fashion that Madam Perkins is in creating agencies to handle labor problems. Secretary Ickes recently had a run-in with Nelson when the latter decided there were no materials available for Shasta dam and that for the time being, at least, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. power plant on Pit river could furnish energy to consumers. Mr. Ickes decided that Nelson, despite his high position, was not "power-minded" and was against government ownership of power. According to report, Ickes took the matter to the White House, where the controversy was resolved in favor of Nelson.

Report here is that Krug has undertaken to block the establishment of war industries in Washington and Oregon requiring large loads of cheap power. His new job will enable him to play up his favorite region, which is not the Pacific northwest.

Public Opinion Sounded Congressional members from the northwest have received results of a survey in Oregon and Washington showing that public sentiment is 4 to 1 against any change in the power set-up until after the war. The result in each state is practically identical and discloses that the people are 11 to 1 in favor of the public ownership question being determined by popular vote rather than by congress.

Medicos Feel Pinch And now rationing of physicians and nurses. Such heavy demands have been made on the northwest for doctors by army and navy that those now practicing for civilians are no spring chickens, and scores of small communities have been cleared of medicos. The military forces will make additional demands and they will not be too particular about the age. Nurses also are at a premium. Until quite recently there have been complaints by the medical profession against the
