

Labor Board Gets Judicial Wage Power

Adjustment Authority Believed Sufficient to Ban Any Union Revolt

WASHINGTON, May 13—(AP)—The War Labor board is back on a judicial basis today in the opinion of its public members, and an incipient labor revolt is believed averted as a result of wage control concessions granted by Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Byrnes' policy directive authorizes the WLB to make wage adjustments "to aid in the effective prosecution of the war or to correct gross inequities," provided price ceilings or production cost levels are not affected. This is substantially the authority the board has sought since the president issued his hold-the-line order on April 8, limiting the board's operations to the "little adjustments" and the correction of "inward wages."

Byrnes emphasized, however, that any wage adjustments which may furnish the basis either to increase price ceilings or to resist otherwise justifiable reductions in price ceilings * * * or which may increase the production costs above the level prevailing in comparable plants or establishments" must be approved by Byrnes before becoming effective.

Move Meets Approval

Chairman William H. Davis said the new directive, issued yesterday, "gives the board full judicial discretion within clearly stated limitations and for clearly defined purposes, and that's good administration."

Dean Wayne L. Morse said he approved "because its judicial procedures make it possible for the board to perform its function of assisting the director of economic stabilization in holding the line against inflation."

The other two public members, Dr. George W. Taylor and Dr. Frank P. Graham, were known to hold similar views.

None of the board members would discuss specifically the directive's possible effect on a decision in the coal mine wage dispute, but one of them, who cannot be identified, made this comment in response to a question: "The board is no longer prohibited by any rigid rule from doing justice."

May Allow Labor Ire

Labor members would not comment immediately for reasons of organization policy, but there was quotable evidence that this partial restoration of the board's discretionary power went a long way toward turning off the heat that was sure to be engendered at CIO and AFL meetings beginning today.

The CIO vice presidents meet today in Cleveland and the executive board meets there tomorrow. The AFL executive council will convene next Monday in Washington. Their protests are expected to be concentrated on prices. Labor leaders had denounced the hold-the-line order as a "straitjacket" for the War Labor board while providing little effective control over prices. The WLB itself called the April 8 order "unworkable" without some clarification.
