Washington News From an Inside View Argument, Sentiment, Comment

By HARRIS ELLSWORTH

Congressman, Fourth Oregon District

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The congress was saddened and shocked this week by the sudden death of Harry L. Englebright, representative from California. He seemed to be in good health. Thursday morning he was taken to the hospital and his death was announced that afternoon. He was taken by a heart attack.

Harry Englebright has served continuously in congress since 1926. He was one of the leaders in the house and has been our republican "whip." Each party has a whip—a man whose duty it is to see that members are on the floor ready to vote on contested legislation. The whip organization also takes a sort of straw vote occasionally when the vote appears to be close—just to find out how things stand. Contrary to the implication carried by the rugged term "whip," the whip organization (by the term organization is meant Englebright and two assistants) makes no attempt to influence the vote of a member. In fact I have never yet had any member of congress suggest how I should vote.

Just another word or two about Harry Englebright. He was a tall, thin, dignified man. The notice of his death gave his age as 58. I would have guessed it around 46. He was a friendly man, well educated, well read and a man I enjoyed conversing with.

It has been raining here off and on all week. One minute, fine spring weather—wonderful—the next it is pouring—and I mean POURING! Here it is the middle of the month of May and we've had very little of what I have always heard about as the wonderful spring weather in Washington. Just unusual, I guess.

This week the Federal Housing authority approved the construction of a number of new homes in the city of Sutherlin. I was delighted for I had been working on that problem for weeks. Sutherlin has had a regular "boom" and its population has increased, as a result of lumber and mining activity, far beyond the dwelling capacity of the city. I am hopeful that additional dwelling units will also be approved. We had a very good case—but this is a big government and we are fighting a global war. Even a good case must be crowded along or it

Sugar Pine Mill At Tiller Will Renew Operation

The Southern Oregon Sugar Pine company mill at Tiller will resume operations next Monday after being closed since last December by weather and road conditions. Elton Jackson, manager, reports Logging was started 10 days ago.

The South Umpqua road is being improved and already has been surfaced beyond the company's present logging operations, Jackson states. The improvements now under way will provide an all-year road to Camp Comfort, he reports.

Prospects for the mill's operations during the season are very good. Contracts have been received from the federal government to keep the plant operating at capacity throughout the year, Jackson states. Sugar pine is being brought for airplane stock at the present time, as well as being used in large quantities in making patterns.
