Flood of Bombs and Water Hits Germany

All axis Europe is taking a flood-tide pounding from allied bombers and two of western Germany's big industrial areas are flooded as the result of a dramatic RAF blast. Blasting of the Mohne and Eder dams has inundated cities and war factories, washed out railroads, bridges, docks and communications systems, and threatened use of many of Germany's canals. Map shows flooded areas.

Dewey Favors Hog Killing to Divert Needed Grain Feed

COLUMBUS, O., June 21.—(AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York asserted today he favored killing western hogs if that would provide greater grain feed for eastern dairy cattle and poultry.

His remark came in a discussion with two western governors at the opening session of the annual governors' conference, and followed an assertion by Dewey that unless more grain became available in the east milk rationing might become necessary by October.

Gov. Henry F. Schreier of Indiana told Dewey his state had more hogs than ever before and the grain was necessary to feed them.

"Would the New York governor advise us to kill our pigs?" the Indian asked.

Dewey, springing to his feet, replied: "I would advocate the immediate execution of your pigs which are competing with my cows for corn." And then, with a smile, he added:

"But I would advocate eating them and not plowing them under."

Dewey said the need for grain had become so acute that New Yorkers were turning to Canadian market. Feeding corn to hogs and beef cattle, he said, was "wasteful" because milk cows and hens produce "far more food per pound of feed than the meat-producing animals."

Gov. Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, referring to Dewey's remark that Canadian markets were receiving some attention, asserted: "If the northeast gets another source of grain, the Midwest will arrange to change its industrial buying habits."

Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts asked Dewey if he expected any substantial improvement in the eastern food situation.

"Not until there is a total revision of our economic concepts," Dewey replied. "I believe you and I will face a pretty serious milk situation this fall."

The conference opened on a keynote of sovereignty of the individual states.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

One day the Psalmist wrote: "I will lift up mine eyes into the hills from whence cometh my help." This does not indicate a superstitious reverence for high places. Rather David's thought is that in our needs we must look beyond the mountains to the God who made them and sustains them. There is something inspiring about mountains. One can never be the same when once he has looked upon such mighty works of creation as Pikes Peak, Shasta, Mt. Hood and Rainier, especially if you have climbed them. It is hard to look at them and be an atheist, or an agnostic. The honest man must concede that nothing short of omnipotent power can account for them. The mountains invite us to look up. Bunyan's "Man with Muckrake" could look no way but down. So he lost his crown. H. H. Hadley of the Bowers mission says, "The night I was converted I went out and looked up at the stars. I had not seen them for many years." The drunkard never looks up. There are so many things in this world to keep us looking down, how grateful we are for something that makes us look up. A great writer said we should read a fine poem, look at a great painting, hear a great oratory every day; that is one way of looking up. Buckrahe could look no way about Jerusalem so the Lord is round about his people." Look up, and not down. Amen.

There aren't many of these grand old warriors left, but 7 million of the great-grandsons and great, great-grandsons of these men and their comrades are in fighting uniform today. They're united in a common cause—to lick the Axis.

A place worth in memory of those who are gone; carry on with another War Bond for those who fight today.

Reds Boost Toll Of German Planes

MOSCOW, June 21.—(AP)—Land warfare on the Soviet front lapsed into local scouting operations and sporadic artillery bombardments today just one day short of the second anniversary of Germany's attack on Russia.

A tense red army awaited the summer offensive many observers believed Hitler must launch soon if he hopes to try to knock Russia from the war before the allies attack in the west, but the continuation of day and night bombings was the only indication that a large-scale smash might be expected soon.

The Russians announced last night that 276 German planes had been knocked down during last week, boosting enemy aircraft losses to 3,595 in seven weeks. The Russians said their losses during the week were 94.

A German transport was sunk and a tanker and two transports were set afire in the Barents sea during an attack by Russian bombers, torpedo carriers and torpedo planes, the Russians said today.

Carolina Demos Refuse to Give to Party Campaign

SPARTANBURG, S. C., June 16.—(AP)—The Spartanburg Herald said today the South Carolina Democratic executive committee had unanimously refused a request of the national democratic campaign for funds.

Disagreement of the state committee with the national policies of the party was the basis for refusal to contribute to the 1944 party war chest, the Herald said. The newspaper, saying it was quoting state committeemen but not naming them, said the chief reason for the reported dissent was the resentment of the South Carolina group at what it called apparent efforts of the national committee "to woo the Negro vote at the expense of southern feelings."

The committeemen, the Herald said, at a meeting in Columbia two weeks ago, instructed State Chairman Winchester Smith of Barnwell county to write the national committee of their refusal to comply with the request for a contribution to national party funds.

The state based its refusal on two grounds, the Herald said it was informed. They were represented to be: (1) That the unit's treasury was in no position to contribute funds to the national campaign, and (2) that even if it were, the committee would still refuse a contribution because it did not "see eye to eye with the national committee on matters of policy."

Every day that the 12th air force fought in the last phase of the Tunisian campaign, General Doolittle's air fighters needed as much aviation gasoline as would fill two railroad tank trains of 60 cars each.

Your WASHINGTON REPORTER!

You have your own reporter in Washington when you read Associated Press news in this newspaper. He's there to write the news of your home town and state and nothing else!

He's a member of AP's Regional Service staff in Washington. This service maintains a whole corps of capital reporters recruited from AP bureaus the country over and assigned exclusively to write news of state and home town interest.

These men report the activities of your senators and representatives and interview delegations to the capital.

They report postmaster appointments, armed service promotions and the actions of boards and commissions.

They tell you what OPA's next move is going to be in your community, how the newest manpower ruling will apply locally and how Uncle Sam's expanding war effort is going to affect your city and state. In short, these AP men report every Washington development of regional interest.

The Associated Press pioneered with this Regional Service. Through this newspaper it brings you all the home town news from Washington.
