Labor-Manager Advisory Body for Lumber Created

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—Creation of a labor-management advisory committee for the west coast lumber industry was announced today by J. Philip Boyd, director of the lumber and lumber products division of the War Production board.

Headed by Lewis H. Mills, one time president of the Pacific Logging congress and recently named consultant to the lumber division of WPB, the committee is expected to take "positive and prompt action" on problems besetting the industry, including shortages of skilled labor in the woods and working and living conditions which affect production.

Labor representatives of the group are Bert Sleeman of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners (AFL) and Worthy Lowery of the International Woodworkers of America (CIO). Management representatives are Judd Greenman, general manager of the Oregon-American Lumber company and treasurer of the West Coast lumbermen's association, and George T. Gerlinger, president and manager of the Willamette Valley Lumber company.

Boyd said the committee will meet regularly and work closely with WPB, and also recommend action to other agencies on problems over which WPB has no jurisdiction.

Mills formerly worked for the Mist Logging company, Mist Ore. His committee will function under the general direction of F. H. Brundage, WPB's western log and lumber administrator at Portland.
