Italian Morale Sinking; Fascist Party Splitting

BERN, Switzerland, July 12.—(AP)—The entire fortress of Europe was on the alert today for new lightning allied thrusts as axis leaders in Germany and Italy anxiously watched the progress of the battle for the Mediterranean island of Sicily.

Dispatches reaching here today from Berlin and Rome conceded that the allies had established at least four bridgeheads in Sicily and looked ahead grimly to a day not far distant when they expect invasion barges to grate upon their shores along the Mediterranean.

Of the two axis capitals Berlin took the news of the invasion more calmly, pointing out that it had long been expected and declaring that advance allied parachutists and airborne units had been annihilated or surrounded and captured. Axis sources gave few details, however on the progress of the fighting in Sicily.

There was mounting tension in Rome and on the mainland of Italy.

One dispatch from Milan said that Premier Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele had made a point of being seen publicly in Rome, where the "atmosphere is heavy."

It was also reported that there had been further expulsions in the fascist party in an effort to bolster crumbling morale and Italian newspapers were enlisted in a campaign to whip up enthusiasm for the fighting ahead.

(The London Daily mail reported that Mussolini had appealed to the king to address the Italian people in an effort to ease the tension which followed reports of the Sicilian invasion.)

(London advices also said that many arrests had occurred in Naples, where Alfred Cucco, vice secretary of the fascist party, broadcast an appeal to Sicilians and Italians.)
