Postwar Policy Dispute Menaces G. O. P. Harmony

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—An internal ruckus that has been brewing quietly in republican ranks over the scope of a foreign policy declaration for 1944 was out in the open today with public charges and denials that the Republican Postwar association aims to "split" the party by harping against peacetime "isolationists."

Officers of the association, organized recently in Chicago and New York, came to grips with Chairman Harrison E. Spangler of the republican nation committee here when they called to urge that strong foreign cooperation resolutions be presented to the party's postwar advisory council meeting at Mackinac island, Mich., Sept. 6 and 7.

Formal statements and press conferences, sparked by an exchange of cold stares and warm remarks by publicity agents for each side, followed the closed meeting at republican headquarters with these tangible results:

1. Deneen A. Watson, Chicago attorney and national chairman of the association, served notice that his group would fight for a republican presidential candidate and platform standing "four-square" for American participation in peace-preservation machinery and would carry the issue to the rank and file regardless of what action is taken by the advisory council on Labor day. He denied his group is backing Wendell Willkie or any other specific person for the presidency at this time.

Spangler is Reassuring
2. Spangler promised to lay the association proposals before the council and said in a formal statement:

"I am sure that republicans, and the people as a whole, can look with confidence to the official council of 49 to help guide America towards a better world. It is composed of republican leaders chosen at the polls by the votes of millions of Americans. They are well equipped to advise the republican party."

3. Watson told newsmen that Spangler read to his delegation of five a letter from an unnamed westerner saying the association was trying to "split" the party. He said he did not believe Spangler himself believed the charge.

"Our reply," Watson said, "was that unless we bring this foreign policy issue to the forefront now and acquaint the rank and file with its meaning, we will really split the party." He denied his group would "bolt" the party if it did not "have its way," as contended in some editorials.

LET'S FACE FACTS

-even if they are unpleasant

THE forests of this area supply critical materials used in the prosecution of the war . . . and you may be sure that they will become important military targets in case of attempted raids. In fact, southern Oregon forests have already been attacked! Other attempts are almost certain to be made—and if successful will divert sorely needed manpower from war industries to the task of fighting destructive fire and will consume vitally needed war materials.

The Japs well know the value of the forests of this state and would be willing to pay a high price for a successful raid here. Many "in the know" honestly believe that an enemy raid WILL be attempted somewhere on the Pacific Coast, maybe in several places.

You can actually shorten the war by helping insure the FAILURE of such an attack. And you don't have to put on a uniform to do it, either. Here's how:

Sign up for non-military, volunteer work in the vital Aircraft Warning Service — the amazing warning system of the U. S. Army that keeps the whole Pacific Coast constantly alert, warns of the approach of unidentified aircraft, actually plots the course of every aircraft approaching or flying over this area.

Join the AWS today.
