British more help in the way of supplies and munitions and after Pearl Harbor we came in with EVERYTHING, thus far more than offsetting the loss of France.

Germany has nobody to offset the loss of Italy.

THE news appears to have quieted down. That really isn't true. What has happened is that the censorship has TIGHTENED UP. There were a few days of almost complete chaos in Italy when the censorship was leaking badly and we were hearing things.

These leaks have now been plugged.

Plenty is still happening in Italy, and in the course of time we'll hear of it. Over the long pull, the development resulting from Italy's crack-up will be favorable rather than unfavorable to our side.

KEEP this in mind: In Italy, a government has fallen and another is trying to take its place. In such cases, anarchy always threatens. We're trying to prevent complete anarchy, so we may have an Italian government to deal with.

It's at least a fair guess that the Germans are PROMOTING anarchy.

THERE'S a new development. In the neighborhood of 200 of our Liberator bombers fly from Cairo to a round trip of 2400 miles to bomb the Rumanian oil fields that are supposed to supply about a third of Germany's oil needs.

They went over at smokestack level, attacking refineries, storage tanks, distilleries and cracking plants—all the paraphernalia of an established oil field. At least seven refineries are believed to have been hit disastrously and the whole field was left blazing. Our commanders think the raid may materially affect the course of the war. It MIGHT. Oil is immensely important.

We lost at least 20 bombers and several more have not yet returned to their base. We're sure we destroyed at least 50 defending German planes.

KEEP your eye on the war in the air. It's going to get more and more important as the days pass. It's already the biggest single factor. Witness the reported COMPLETE destruction of the great German city of Hamburg leading the Germans to fear that Berlin will be next on the list for complete destruction.

Also keep your eye on Crete. Something's almost sure to happen there soon.

Also note these stories of fighting that develops when the Germans attempt to DISARM Italian troops. They're significant.

DON'T disregard all these hints of more or less frantic negotiations supposed to be going on in the Vatican, in Turkey, etc. You may be quite sure the diplomats are exceedingly busy, and you never can tell when something may come of their dickering.

Editor News-Review:

In listening to President Roosevelt's speech the other evening, I was reminded of the Canadian government's settlement to the soldiers of the last war. At that time I was on a homestead in the Peace River country in Alberta. There was a colony

THERE has been a record switching and doubling of jobs in the News-Review office during the past few days. With two men in the hospital and another on vacation, the remaining regular employees are getting a mighty tough workout.

Out in the mechanical department, Ralph Russell, linotype foreman, and Violet Lewis are working day and night to set the type required for each day's paper, while Lorne Swenson, one of the three full-time linotype operators lies in a hospital bed, minus his appendix. Ross Jacobs, who took over the job of printer in the ad alleys when Louis Gau went to the hospital in Eugene recently for a major operation, also is a linotype operator, and has not only been making up the ads but has set a good deal of type for both news and advertisements.

Edwin Knapp, business manager, and his corps of workers in the business office—Oliver Hives, Marge Miles, Clarethel Roselund and Orville French—have let a lot of first-of-the-month business accumulate, while they pitched in to help alleviate the troubles resulting from curtailed working force. The proof-reader, Elizabeth Campbell, doubles in waiting on trade at the counter. Dick Bush, job shop pressman, rolls bundles to help Harold Hiney, mailer.

A newspaper is a closely geared organization. Every employee has a definite and specialized job. When all are in their places everything moves smoothly, each performing his task in an orderly and efficient way. But when one is absent it is like a missing spark plug, causing the engine to limp even though it keeps running.

We explained some of our manpower problems a few days ago and made a request for cooperation from advertisers. We want to thank our advertising clients for their wonderfully fine response. We asked that copy be furnished by 10 a. m. on the day preceding publication. Not only has this request been fully observed, but some regular advertisers are bringing in copy three or four days ahead of publication.

The News-Review management is mighty proud of its crew—they're swell people. Working long, exhausting hours is no pleasure. It takes real loyalty to stick when the going is so tough.

We also appreciate, more than we can tell, the cooperation given by our advertisers. It has been a mighty big help.

But we are serving fair warning, here and now, that the next reader who stops us with a supercilious sneer to point out a typographical error is going to get bopped right on the beeper, if we can muster strength enough to lift a tired fist.

of soldiers homesteading there and the government gave each $80 per month for six months; gave them money for buildings, fencing, machinery and stock. My place was a kind of wayside inn and 15 of those soldiers stayed with men and were to pay their board. Instead, when they got their pay, they would go to Prairie City and come back in a week broke. Very few of them proved up on their homesteads. They took no care of anything and after two years all but a few claims were turned back to the government.

I don't think our boys want anything like that. They are fighting for a chance to live a free and honorable life and want the chance when they come home to go into their different business and are not asking for donations. We all know money and idleness breed trouble for all.

County Convention Christian Churches Set for August 27

The Douglas County Christian church convention will be held at the Roseburg Christian church Saturday, August 27, beginning at 10:30 a. m. with the afternoon session at 1:30 and followed by an evening session. The convention theme will be "Young People in the Church."

Rev. E. W. Powell, of the Myrtle Creek Christian church, will speak on the subject, "Responsibility of Adults Toward Young People." Rev. James Bartholomew, minister of the Yoncalla Christian church, will speak on the topic, "Methods of Challenging Young People."

A potluck dinner will be held at noon and reports of the churches will be presented. In the afternoon, Rev. William Deickman, of the Oakland Christian church, will speak on the subject, "Young People as Leaders in the Church." An open forum discussion will follow and will be led by Mrs. Enid Johnson, of Drain. The discussion will be centered on the thought, "The Future of the Church."

All persons interested are invited to attend the one-day convention.

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN

Lots of new shows are coming our way—and here's one at 6:30 tonight that is so new we didn't know about it in time to give you any advance notice. If you've ever wanted an opportunity to express yourself to the whole world, to tell your pet peeves—in other words, to let your hair down, you'll enjoy listening in while others do the same thing—the program is very appropriately titled "Let Your Hair Down"—so, lend an ear come 6:30 tonight. On Friday at 4:30 the U. S. Navy School of Music salutes the 153rd anniversary of the U. S. Coast Guard on the "For Victory" show. A Date at Eight with Annaloris takes you on a good neighbor tour of South America—you'll make a musical visit to Rio, Brazil and the Argentine. In fact the piano numbers are all a bit geographical because she's going to "Novada" too. She'll sing "Through the Years" and "Romance" this week too, so don't miss your Date At Eight. Don't forget you get another new show this Friday—What's the

Violation of Coos Bay Farmer Contract Charged

SALEM, Aug. 5 (AP)—The Coos Bay Farmers cooperative filed suit for $50,000 damages in Marion county circuit court yesterday against 12 persons whom the cooperative accuses of having induced members of the cooperative to violate their marketing contracts. The complaint also charges that the 12 defendants circulated rumors reflecting on the integrity of the cooperative's directors. Members of the cooperative, mostly Willamette valley residents have bought oyster beds in the Coos bay district, the complaint asserting that each member must deliver all their oysters to the cooperative, which has exclusive marketing rights. It was this agreement, the cooperative claims, that was violated at the instigation of the defendants.

GIVE UP?

TOPEKA, Kas.—Prof. H. J. Colburn of Washburn college walked into his classroom to teach his first group of navy men. He found them standing at attention. He told them good morning. He poked around in his desk a bit. Finally he flushed and said: "All right, gentlemen. How do I get you to sit down?"
