WE SALUTE THE EYES AND EARS OF THE ARMY AIR FORCE

(By A. W. Service)

Aircraft warning service week has been completed and due tribute paid to the thousands of civilians who have lent a hand to the U. S. army air forces by serving on observation posts, in filter or information centers and in many other ways.

The press and radio both went out of their way to honor the AWS, and we of the service certainly express our heartfelt thanks for the many kind words said about us.

When you serve a shift on a post or in the filter center, there certainly is little glory coming your way but when you see the many business houses of our town spending large sums of money with the newspapers to express the appreciation of the citizens for our services, then you really have a new and keener outlook toward the nation we all love and the people who reside therein.

Speaking of AWS week we must toss a few bouquets toward the men behind the scenes; Colonel Stratton, Major Morgan, Captain Young, Captain Richards and Lt. Glotzbach. Also, the fine hand of PFC Victor Galmukoff did an excellent bit of work in the art department. He has a knack for artistic endeavors that was well demonstrated in the many illustrations seen in the newspapers and we don't want to forget the Sector Sergeants who did their usual fine job.

Then there are the many other persons who donated time and effort to make the week a success. Among them will be found the names of the volunteers who manned the filter center that was set up in a downtown Portland department store window during the day and the observers from Washington county who daily manned the observation tower at Victory Center.

Speaking of Portland's Victory Center reminds us that it was during the program that a lady approached Colonel Stratton and Lt. Hynes and asked if she could serve on some post. She presented her credentials from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where she served as a volunteer observer. Her name is Carolyn Eitel and it was suggested that she contact the Milwaukee, Ore., post as it was the closest one to where she was staying while here.

The Victory Center observation post had an amusing incident that might be worth repeating here. Seems that during the middle of the day a large crowd had gathered in front of the department store window to watch the workings of a filter center, and across the street stood the tower of the OP. One of the young ladies on duty was intently watching the crowd and the sky in equal rotation when suddenly she spied a plane. Hurrying to the handset telephone she picked it up and remarked to her co-observer: "Heck, there's a plane, guess I'll have to report it." Her words carried across the street to the huge crowd because her telephone was really a microphone attached to a public address system, and the citizens of Portland had a good laugh. But the young lady reported the plane and even though slightly flustered, did the report correctly.

We hope in the near future to localize the weekly columns, and give to each district just the news of their own observation posts except where some unusual incident occurs. In order to do this, we need more news from you observers... so send in any items and we will use every one that we possibly can.

Adjustment on Hatching Egg Prices Planned

An attempt to bring Pacific coast commercial hatcherymen together on uniform and equitable prices for hatching eggs is to be undertaken immediately, according to Mrs. H. A. Watzig of the Watzig hatchery. Mrs. Watzig, recently elected president of the Oregon Baby Chick association, which is a part of the International Baby Chick association, has returned from Chicago, where she attended the I. B. C. A. All Industry War Time conference.

One of the principal issues before the conference, she reports, was the disparity in prices paid for commercial hatching eggs in various poultry centers of the country.

Prices in eastern and mid-western areas, she states, are around 43-45 cents, while in Oregon hatcherymen are paying 53 to 64 cents. A mandatory OPA ceiling is threatened unless hatcherymen "put their own house in order," and eliminate cut-throat competition, Mrs. Watzig reports.

Flock owners will be principal losers if OPA prices are set, as mid-west rates doubtless will be made to apply, Mrs. Watzig believes. If hatcherymen, on the other hand, try to work out a mutual agreement, regional adjustments probably will permit continuation of the premium which heretofore has existed for Pacific coast eggs.

A meeting will be held in October to work out details.

One of the resolutions passed by the conference requests that the use of more expensive and less effective substitutes for feed purposes be discontinued, she reported. There is ample corn in the mid-west, it was stated, and if the commercial poultrymen and dairymen had the privilege of paying the market value on corn as established by the corn-hog ration, instead of the ceiling price of $1.07, they would have a right to a fair share of the nation's corn supply.

Christian Science Workers Send Supplies to England

A total of 602,200 garments have been shipped to England, according to an official report made by the Christian Science War Relief Sewing groups of this country, and 2000 garments are sent every month from America to Russia.

Refugees in Great Britain, Channel Island, Norway, France, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Latvia, Holland, Belgium, Spain, Greece and Malaya have received the benefit of these garments made by the women of this country. The organization reports it has still been unable to get garments through to the needy in China, but have made up this difference by donations of many to that country.

Mrs. Annie L. Russell is chairman of the group in Roseburg and hundreds of garments have been sent out of this community to Portland to be shipped to England. Women of the community have assisted in the sewing by attending the weekly sewing sessions every Thursday at the Perkins building, however, the group will discontinue further sewing meetings until fall.

Anti-Freeze Assured for Motorists of the Nation

More Men Needed In Navy's Seabees

Much of the credit for the United Nation's gains against the axis is due to the miraculous achievements of the U. S. navy's construction battalions (Seabees), according to a recent statement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. These are the men who build advance bases beyond the continental limits of the U. S. and who defend these vital installations.

But, as the allies extend their gains in enemy territory, the greater becomes the need for additional men for the Seabees. Right now the situation is critical, according to Chief Specialist W. E. Bell of the Roseburg navy recruiting station. Thousands of skilled workers are needed immediately for duty in the combat areas.

Mechanics, carpenters, machinists, draftsmen, electricians, riggers, powermen, pipe-fitters and plumbers, welders, wharf-builders and concrete workers are a few of the skilled workmen so greatly in demand. Any man with experience in one of these trades can qualify for a petty officer rating in the Seabees, Chief Bell reports, and is asked to go to the navy recruiting station without delay for a preliminary interview.

All men between 17 and 50 can enlist in the Seabees. Those in the draft group—18 to 38—who have not been called for induction, may volunteer for induction. Details of this procedure may be obtained from the navy recruiter. However, it is emphasized that draft-age applicants must be able to qualify for skilled trade ratings. The quota for 17-year-olds and those over 38 is unlimited in both skilled and unskilled ratings.

Chief Bell stresses the fact that application at the navy recruiting station does not affect a man's present draft status. He is not obligated in any way until he is cleared for voluntary induction by his draft board.

Those men who would like information on what kind of a job they could get in the Seabees are urged to see Warrant Carpenter L. J. Wolgamoed, Seabee Recruiting Officer, who will be at the Eugene recruiting station on Tuesday August 17th from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. Here the men can find out what kind of a rating he is eligible for as well as find out if he is qualified for service in the Construction Battalion. Those men who cannot go to Eugene can contact Chief Bell at the local navy recruiting station on Saturday, August 21 from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Makes me feel extra good heavin' you talk that way, Judge... never realized I was contributin' to the war effort in the way you mention."

"You certainly are, Hank. Part of the grain you farmers grow is used by the beverage distilling industry to make alcohol for war purposes. Hundreds of millions of gallons are required every year for smokeless powder, medical supplies, chemical warfare materials, shatterproof glass, lacquer for camouflaging equipment, fuel to propel torpedoes and in the making of critically needed synthetic rubber. But, Hank, the grain used in distilling this alcohol is not thrown away. It is processed and comes back to the farm again in the form of distillers' dried grains or dried solubles which you use for dairy feeds, hog supplements and poultry mashers. This year alone it is estimated 388,000 tons of these much needed feed stuffs will be produced by the distillers."

"I can see now, Judge, why you say it's a mighty good thing we have a legal distilling industry in times like these."

Conference of Alcohol Beverage Industries, Inc.
