Run of Chinook Disproves Theory Of Dam Blockade

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The $10,000,000 Columbia river salmon industry, which was supposed to have died of strangulation this year, is very much alive.

The Oregon fish commission disclosed today the spring run of chinooks was above the average of 2,225,000 pounds. Figures also showed fish are getting over Bonneville dam en route upstream.

This would seem to disprove the dire prediction of 1938, the year the dam was built, that Bonneville would choke off the salmon industry, preventing fish from getting to or from spawning grounds.

Since the salmon generally were assumed to live at sea four years before returning to spawn, the 1942 run was expected by opponents of the dam to be the last great run in the river.

The 1943 figures silenced many, but some still foresee death for the industry. Their argument is that the life span is longer than four years and the salmon entering the river now went to sea before the dam was built.

This argument may stand up for years, for the way of the salmon is mysterious, and experts are not prepared to state definitely and unanimously how long the fish lives at sea.

Meanwhile the fishing's good.

New Device Ups Typewriter Speed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP)—A Navy department typist looked nonchalant, and a little bored, today as she zipped along at 180 words a minute. The world's speed record is 149.

She was beating a smooth tattoo on one of the navy's new typewriters, its keyboard designed by Lieut. Commander August Dvorak. Formerly of the University of Washington and now the department's top time and motion study expert, he has devised the first major keyboard change since the machine was invented 70 years ago.

The navy disclosed that the new arrangement divides labor: 41 per cent for the left hand and 56 for the right. On the present standard keyboard, it is about 57 and 43 respectively. The result of the change, the navy claimed, is an increased output of about 35 per cent.

"About all it doesn't do," one typist observed somewhat wistfully, "is reduce stenographic hips."

OUTPOINTED

GREAT FALLS, Mont.—Mrs. J. E. Grady returned home and found 60 points in red ruffon coupons on the kitchen table.
