

Ten Recruits Goal Of Wac's Campaign In Douglas County

Local Legion Auxiliary members, co-operating with the Wac's "All-States" casualty replacement recruiting campaign, indicated today that they have swung into action in an all-out effort to enroll a woman for each Douglas county soldier reported killed or missing. The goal is ten recruits.

Mrs. Ethyl Roselund, county chairman, expressed a hope that the goal would be reached by Wednesday, October 27, when the Wac carnival caravan will arrive for a two-day showing in Roseburg. The extraordinary carnival unit will be located across from the Montgomery Ward store and will be open to visitors between 10 a. m. and 5 p. m. Free movies concerning life in the Wacs will be shown to women between the ages of 20 and 50 who are eligible for enrollment.

Lt. Margaret Steelhead and Technical Sergeant Ardele Carter will be on hand at all times to explain the unusual opportunities offered to women during the "All-States" recruiting program. They will be assisted by members of the local civilian defense council.

At noon the winners of the local Wac essay contest will be announced and presented with prizes on the "side-show" stage. The winner of first prize honors will also have her essay entered in the district contest, which ends December 7.

Scout Court of Honor Is Scheduled Here Nov. 8

The next Boy Scout district court of honor is slated to be held at the county courthouse on Monday, November 8, according to W. H. Gerretsen, local district scout advancement chairman. At a meeting of local scoutmasters Monday night it was agreed to hold the court of honor on the second Monday evening of alternate months, commencing on November 8.

A new advancement plan has been adopted by the Wallamet area Boy Scout council and it will go into effect with the November 8 court. It contemplates troop boards of review followed by a district court of honor in Roseburg for local troops. Troops in other communities in the district outside of Roseburg will now be able to conduct their own courts of honor independent of Roseburg and thus solve the transportation problem involved.

THE END

Salmon Induced To Change Their Spawning Spots

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP)—You can't teach an old salmon new tricks but if you start when they are young enough that is, before they are born you can persuade a salmon and his spouse to spawn the spawning spots favored by their ancestors.

This fact, long in dispute, has finally been proved at Grand Coulee dam, the fish and wildlife service reported to Interior Secretary Ickes today.

The experiment met its crucial test this year when the children of salmon which four years ago were hauled in refrigerated trucks to new, man-selected spawning places, well back up the Columbia river to spawn and die, as salmon do.

The big question was whether the children, now four years old and near the end of their lives, would attempt to reach the ancestral spawning places above the site where Grand Coulee dam has been built, or whether they would return to the new spots on streams below the dam, where they themselves were spawned.

Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, supervisor of the fish and wildlife service, told Ickes the salmon are not trying to get over Grand Coulee, which is 533 feet high. Instead, they are swimming peacefully to the spots where their parents were transplanted four years ago.

When Grand Coulee was built, no attempt was made to help the salmon upstream with fish ladders, as was done at Bonneville dam, far down the river. This was because Grand Coulee is so high it was felt the young salmon would never survive the plunge over the dam on their trip to the ocean.

Each year since 1939, the fish have been trapped at Bock Island dam, 150 miles below Grand Coulee, on their way upstream, and hauled to the selected spawning spots.

This year, however, when the children of the first transplanted parents had reached the spawning age, 2,000 of them were released from the traps and allowed to continue their migration in order to determine whether the experiment had succeeded.
