formation bulletin indicate that Russia's territorial demands include the Baltic states (Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania), Bessarabia and Bukovina in Rumania, the 1939 Finnish frontiers and a large slice of Poland.

WHATEVER Russia's demands may be, the realistic fact is that she has the MILITARY POWER to back them up. That counts a lot in these diplomatic conferences.

IN London, Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, prime minister of the Union of South Africa, predicted a grand assault on the fortress of Europe in 1944.

U. S. TROOPS, he says, being the LATEST and the freshest on the ground, may have to play a DECISIVE PART in this assault on Hitler's inner fortress.

Taking the hard part of the job remaining to be done in Europe, he thinks, would be JUSTIFICATION for the all-important part America is destined to play in the peace negotiations and the REBUILDING OF THE WORLD.

THE real turning points of the war were Stalingrad and El Alamein (Stalingrad handled by the Russians and El Alamein by the British) and while great American forces will play their part (from here on) nothing can ROB Russia and the British Commonwealth of the glory of having turned the tide.

Rather significantly, Smuts' speech is BEAMED TO AMERICA by the British Broadcasting corporation.

SMUTS is a great and wise man, for whom Americans have much admiration, but the careful timing of his speech suggests the start of a EUROPEAN campaign to shift to America's broad and usually willing shoulders the bulk of the job of finishing the European war and rebuilding the world (at our expense).

WE have to look out for things like that, for that's the way it's done whenever it can be got away with gracefully. (As a lot of it WAS in the last war.)

We shouldn't get angry with our allies for TRYING it.

When private individuals are dickered among themselves on the details of a partnership enterprise, each tries to shove off on the others the bulk of the cost and the hard work, and according to the rules of the game it's quite all right if the other fellow will STAND FOR IT.

It works exactly the same way in international dickered.

THE thing for us to do is to see to it that the hot end of the poker isn't handed to us. The

PROTECTING A GOOD NAME

EDITORIAL

By Charles V. Stanton

A CHEHALIS, WASHINGTON, groceryman is decidedly down on Dillard cantaloupes, although everyone knows not a better melon is to be found in the world than those marketed under the Dillard label. Like a lot of people who "cut off their nose to spite their face," this groceryman declares in his letter to the Umpqua Valley Chamber of Commerce that he "will know better than ever to buy a product of Roseburg farms again."

We feel that the grocer has a right to be angered, if conditions are as he represents them. He purchased from the wholesaler a crate of melons, "so green that the seeds were still soft—too green ever to ripen or be fit for use, and every melon of every crate a total loss to every retailer who bought them."

We also agree with the store owner when he says, "a stamp bearing the name of your city should be made to stand for something other than crooked merchandising."

But we feel sorry for that groceryman's customers. In his peevishness he is condemning the entire Dillard melon industry because one grower was unscrupulous enough to slip through the trade a shipment unfit for use. His customers, therefore, are not going to enjoy the taste of a Dillard melon in its prime—a melon unsurpassed for sweetness and texture—almost a confection in its wonderful flavor. And because the customers will not know the vastly superior quality of the Dillard melon, the growers in the Umpqua Valley have lost an important potential market.

One farmer perhaps made a few extra dollars by sending out some unripened melons which would have been lost because of wet or cold weather if left on the vines for the ripening period. But because of his action, he and his fellow growers will be deprived of an outlet which might have brought in a considerable profit in this and future seasons.

We have all heard of cases in which farmers used stovepipes to fill the center of potato sacks with little potatoes. We can well remember the practice of some berry growers in putting a layer of big berries on the top of a box filled otherwise with runty, half ripened berries. These are practices which are seldom experienced nowadays, but, unfortunately, are found occasionally, resulting from the dishonesty of a very few producers.

Instances such as the one cited by the Chehalis groceryman emphasize the need for a strong farmer's organization which will cooperate in the marketing of a product with dependable quality. Had the melons which left a bad taste in his mouth both figuratively and literally been received by a cooperative organization under rigid inspection, they would have been rejected and would never have gone into the trade. The marketing of farm produce in normal times is becoming as competitive as the industrial field. The product with the highest quality finds the best market. Present wartime conditions are unnormal and there will not always be an outlet for any kind of food product regardless of its quality.

Growers may feel that it is too expensive to maintain an organization with salaried inspectors, managers, etc., but they would find, we believe, that over a period of years they would benefit by the confidence of the wholesale and retail trade and an assured market for their product at the highest obtainable prices. They would further have the insurance that a good name, built upon years of hard work and financial struggle, would be protected.

British and the Russians will be trying to HAND IT TO US, but will think MORE of us, rather than LESS, if we're shrewd enough to look out for our OWN interests.

DESPITE, we have a WAR OF OUR OWN on in the Pacific, which will start in a big way as soon as the war in Europe is over.

It can leaders are so short-sighted as to let us get involved FAR BEYOND OUR SHARE in Europe, the result will be bad trouble for us in the Pacific.

If we're going in for internationalism "as on the face of it we must've simply got to learn to look out for ourselves for that's the first rule of international dealings.

Missionary to Speak At Methodist Church

Mrs. Perry O. Hanson, missionary of the Methodist church in Shantung province, China's "holy land," will be the guest speaker at the Roseburg Methodist church Sunday morning, October 31.

"She and her husband went to China forty years ago to do pioneer work in the province where they remained all these years," reports the Rev. R. A. Feenstra, local pastor. "They left only when advised to do so by the American government. A missionary son remained but they are looking forward to his safe return on the exchange ship, Grisholm. Dr. P. O. Hanson will be in neighboring churches but we are to hear Mrs. Hanson, who is just as good, the husband says, at the morning service hour."

Extra Points Set for Remote Area Dwellers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(AP)—Those who live in areas so remote they can't get enough fresh milk will be eligible for extra ration points beginning October 26. The OPA said that the supplemental points are intended for a compensating supply of rationed evaporated milk. But they may also be spent for any food rationed under the meats-for-fats program.

Bus Assn. Loses Appeal On Driver Wage Boost

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(AP)—An appeal by the Portland Metropolitan Bus association from a decision of the Pacific Northwest regional War Labor board granting Portland, Ore., bus drivers a ten cent an hour increase was rejected unanimously by the War Labor board.

Wayne L. Morse, public member who wrote the opinion, said the decision of the regional WLB was reasonable and "obviously neither arbitrary nor capricious."
