Christmas Tree Market's Disaster Shows What Would Happen if Foods Were Not Placed on Ration Basis

By JAMES MARLOW and GEORGE ZIELKE
WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The foxes got stung, the eager Beavers were nipped for plenty and the tortoise won.
So, before you take down that Christmas tree, remember the lesson in it. The lesson doesn't end with Christmas.
There was supposed to have been a Christmas tree shortage. Foxy dealers, figuring on a grand buying rush, kited their prices: $6, $7 and $8 a tree.
Then eager-Beaver buys, with money to spare or a fear they'd miss a tree, went out and paid the asking price.
But the tortoise-like cautious cents, who preferred doing with-trees or waited till the price collapsed.

So what does the Christmas tree story prove? Only this: It was a good illustration of what could be expected in this country if necessary commodities were unrationed or were not held under price control.
There would be people fair enough to want to charge only a fair price. Also there would have been people anxious to get rich in a hurry and therefore glad to charge any price they could get.
There would be people foolish enough to pay the asking price no matter how high. Those people might counter by saying: "We're not saps. We have money to spend. We'll spend it on what we want."
And there is the third group, the people without money to spare, who would have had to sit back and watch the unequal distribution of goods.

A TRIBUTE TO THE Retail Salespeople of America

AT the beginning of a new year we pay tribute to those loyal citizens who serve behind the retail counters of America.
Shortages, complications of rationing, the fact that many of their number are in the armed services, make their job today more difficult than ever.
Despite all of this the retail selling job has its high rewards!
Good retail salespeople like their work! They like to meet and serve people! They take pride in each sale well made! And they know that on the home front they support the war effort by helping to maintain our high standard of living.
Try to imagine, for a moment, how your family's daily needs—food, clothing and household supplies—could be taken care of if all the retail salespeople were suddenly spirited away!
During 1944 we will do our best to make pleasant and profitable the work of the people who meet and greet you in Penney's stores.
Not only that, but as a genuine community service we shall put into their hands, for you, the maximum of value and quality that war conditions allow.
