and THREATENING to invade across the channel if the Germans move any considerable number of troops from their west wall defenses to the eastern front.

PACIFIC dispatches tell us the Japs have lost 17 more planes and two more freighters. We lost four planes getting them.

TRANSPORTATION will link the Jap (in his vast island empire) unless he can stop us from sinking his ships as we stopped the Nazi submarines from wrecking the shipping that is Britain's life blood.

SO far, the Jap has been obliging enough to send his ships and planes down into the South Pacific where we can GET AT them.

SO far as Japan is concerned, we're sitting where the Germans sat when they started their all-out submarine warfare against Britain's supply lines.

THIS strategy has been more or less forced on us by the fact that we can spare only a fraction of our strength to the Pacific war until our commitment to lick Hitler first has been made good.

THERE'S an interesting little squib on the wires this week. Czechoslovakian Benes is back in London from Moscow after SIGNING a mutual assistance treaty with Soviet Russia on behalf of his government-in-exile.

ONE wonders about these European governments-in-exile whose members have been living in the comparative peace and security of England (on the proceeds of the national treasuries they carried to London with them) while their PEOPLE have been going through the pure hell of German occupation.

How will their people feel about them when the war ends? How would YOU feel?

A lot of people these days are talking about "risk capital" and the great need for it that will arise after the war.

RECENT dispatches provide an answer to a partial answer, that is).

WELCOME TO THE C. I. O.

EDITORIAL

By Charles V. Stanton

MORE than 200 representative members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations are meeting in Roseburg today as delegates to the sixth annual state convention of the C. I. O.

Organized labor has occupied a prominent place in the state and national picture in recent years. Some of the scenes have not been pretty. Some uninformed people have grown to picture all of organized labor in the lurid colors used by radicals and racketeers, or the smudges so adroitly placed by professional political smearers.

No nation in the world has ever approached the industrial record of the United States in this period of emergency. Our production records have been astounding even to our national leaders.

These accomplishments would not have been possible had it not been for organized labor. The full weight and power of organization has been thrown into the emergency by the responsible labor leaders.

Here in the state of Oregon its membership is predominantly from the workers in woods, sawmills and other activities connected with the timber industry.

The history of the Congress of Industrial Organizations dates back to the American Federation of Labor convention in 1935 at Atlantic City. The unions affiliated with the A. F. L. are organized by crafts.

Membership in the State of Oregon totals in excess of 65,000 and includes more than 95 per cent of the workers in the timber industry.

The highest C. I. O. initiation fee is $10 and the highest dues are around $2.50 per month, covering administration, benefits and insurance.

The members of the C. I. O. have just cause to take pride in their organization. Their record of accomplishment in raising standards of working conditions, protecting health and safety, and affording greater security to workmen and their families has been notable.

Roseburg should feel proud to be host to a group of men officially designated as representatives of the C. I. O. in Oregon.

Halsey Praises Yanks' Superiority Over Jap Fighters

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7. (AP)—When American troops get to where Tokyo now stands, there'll be "a little celebration where Tokyo was," says admiral William F. Halsey, commander of Allied Forces in the South Pacific.

The comment prefaced Halsey's appearance at the Army-Navy War Conference which begins today with discussions by Gen. H. H. Arnold, Army Air Forces Chief, and other military officials with West Coast civic and business leaders.

Holding his first press conference since his secret return to the mainland on New Year's eve, Halsey refused to predict yesterday when the Tokyo celebration would take place, declaring he had done so once (New Year's Day, 1943, when he said the Japanese would be defeated in 1943). But, speaking of his operational area, he added: "Yanks Better in Jungle."

"We have the finest representatives of American manhood ever assembled, and they're fighting as one team. The Japs don't like the way they're fighting—and they'll like it even less." Halsey said it was natural that American boys, many of them brought up in the cities, should feel out of place in the jungle at first, but he declared they had proved to be better jungle fighters than the Japanese ever were and are killing the enemy at a ratio of ten to one.

Asked about Japanese naval gunnery, the naval chief answered: "Well, the only time we see it is at night, but we're better than they are. They don't seem to want to come out and play in the daytime."

"Yes, Jap torpedo planes are good," he remarked, "but ours are better. The Jap pilot calibre is going down steadily—no question of that." Sebes, Marines Lauded. Halsey told reporters he wished he were an orator to do justice to the Marine Corps and the Sebes. They have done tremendous things under difficult conditions," he said. "Why, Manila airport is better than any airport in the United States, and the sebes built it. But I feel the same way about every outfit working down there."
