government." He recalled that he had pleaded with congress for two years to take undue profits out of war.

"Price Chaos" Threat Seen

On his third point, a cost of food law, he said it should enable the government to put a reasonable floor under farm prices and a ceiling on the prices that consumers pay. It should apply only to necessities, he declared, and public funds will be required to effectuate it. He figured the cost would be about one per cent of the present annual cost of the war.

Unless the stabilization statute is renewed, he said, the country can expect "price chaos by summer." Stabilization cannot be accomplished by wishful thinking he said, and positive action must be taken to maintain the integrity of the dollar.

The president touched with relative brevity at the outset of his message, on the war conferences which took place overseas in the final weeks of 1943. He hailed them as intended to prevent mistakes made at the conclusion of the last war.

"Of course, we made some commitments," he said. "We most certainly committed ourselves to very large and very specific military plans which require the use of all allied forces to bring about the defeat of our enemies at the earliest possible time."

"But there were no secret treaties or political or financial commitments."

"The one supreme objective for the future, which we discussed for each nation individually, and for all the United Nations, can be summed up in one word—security."

"And that means not only physical security which provides safety from attacks by aggressors. It means also economic security, social security, moral security—in a family of nations."

Warns Against Complacency

Mr. Roosevelt warned against over-confidence and complacency, asserting the way to fight and win the war is "all out" and not with half an eye on battlefronts and half an eye on personal selfish, or political interests at home.

He said he hoped congress would recognize that while 1944 is a political year, "national service is an issue which transcends politics."

He said he believed the American people would welcome a measure based on a just principle of "fair for one, fair for all."

Asking congress to look into means for implementing what he termed an economic, second bill of rights, Mr. Roosevelt vigorously assailed "whining demands of selfish pressure group who seek to feather their nests while young Americans are dying."

He spoke of the need for unity at home, pounding away on a theme he has used before—that there is only one front in the war.

"Each and every one of us," he declared, "has a solemn obligation under God to serve this nation in its most critical hour—to keep this nation great—to make this nation greater in a better world."

Security Plan Outlined

His second bill of rights, under which he said a new basis of security and prosperity could be established for all, included these points:

1. The right to a useful and remunerative job.

2. The right to earn enough to provide adequate food, clothing and recreation.

3. The right of every farmer to a return for his products which will provide a decent living for him and his family.

4. The right of every business man to be free from unfair competition and domination by monopolies.

5. The right of every family to a decent home.

6. The right to adequate medical care and an opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health.

7. The right to adequate protection from economic fears in old age, illness, accident and unemployment.

8. The right to a good education.

Would Avoid Fascism

If history were to repeat and America were to return to the so-called normalcy of the 1920's, he said, it is certain that though we have conquered enemies on battlefields abroad "we shall have yielded to the spirit of fascism here at home."

All clear thinking business men, he added, share a concern over the grave dangers which would ensue from a "rightist reaction" in America.

It is definitely the responsibility of congress, the president emphasized, to explore methods to effectuate the economic bill of rights. Some of its features already are covered by pending legislation, he said, and he added that he would communicate with congress from time to time on these and further proposals.

He gave congress this warning: "In the event that no adequate program of progress is evolved I am certain that the nation will be conscious of the fact."

"Our fighting men abroad—and their families at home—expect such a program and have the right to insist upon it. It is to their demands that this government should pay heed rather than to the whining demands of selfish pressure groups who seek to feather their nests while young Americans are dying."

Although he did not make the recommendation at this point, the president appealed for federal legislation to give soldiers, sailors and marines the right to vote.

Men in uniform know that an overwhelming majority of them will be deprived of a chance to vote, he said. If the matter is left entirely to the states under existing state laws, and that there is no likelihood of these laws being changed in time to let them vote at the next election.

"It is the duty of congress," Mr. Roosevelt said, "to remove this unjustifiable discrimination against the men and women in our armed forces—and to do it as quickly as possible."

No amount of legalistic argument, he said, can beludge the issue in the eyes of 10,000,000 Americans in uniform.

ing in the allied Fifth army advance, which started a week ago and is progressing steadily. However, there was no evidence of weakness in the German defense nor any indication that the allies will be able to make a breakthrough for a big gain.

American Liberators devoted their attention to another key Nazi rail bottleneck in the Balkans by attacking Skopje in Yugoslavia, encountering no opposition.

American Mitchells hit San Benedetto, 35 miles north of Pescara, the Eighth army's objective on the Adriatic coast, while invaders attacking communications north of Rome destroyed six German vehicles, a large ammunition truck, a tank and locomotive.

RAF Wellingtons bombed an airfield at Villorba, 30 miles from Venice, and RAF Mosquitos and Marauders shot up trains in the Po valley and near Bordeaux and Toulouse in France.

Nine German planes were destroyed for a loss of three allied aircraft, headquarters said.

Tokyo Is Goal, Halsey Says.

In Washington, Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of allied forces in the South Pacific, declared the Japanese fleet is seriously crippled, but that "we will keep on pressing and hitting him continuously" until our troops march into Tokyo.

He urged that the American people refuse to accept any peace until troops reach Tokyo.

He said that the forces in the Pacific in continuing to pound the Japanese are relying upon keeping the enemy guessing.

"He'll get set in one place and we'll hit him in another," he said.

Asked about the apparent reluctance of the Japanese fleet to fight, he replied:

"Either they are saving their force until we approach the shore of the Japanese empire or think they can wear us down by attrition tactics and we'll get tired and make a negotiated peace suitable to them, which God knows I hope no one will permit."

holm newspapers said the Germans had evacuated Sarny and that Vatutin's army is threatening to encircle Rovno, another rail junction 50 miles to the southwest.

Vatutin's left wing, operating about 70 miles to the west of Konev's army, captured Veronovitsa and Nemirov in a drive for Vinnitsa and the Warsaw-Odessa railway. A junction of Konev's and Vatutin's forces would isolate thousands of Germans already outflanked in the Smela-Kanew sector of the Dnieper bend. Konev's advance guards were within 15 miles of Smela, the communiques reported.

Guerillas Aid Heavily

Capture of Voronovitsa, 13 miles southeast of Vinnitsa, severed the Voronovitsa-Khrystynovka rail line and put the Russians within seven miles on the Bug river, and 21 miles from the Odessa-Warsaw railway. The Bug forms the last natural Nazi defense line before the Dniester river.

Russian guerrilla forces were reported lending invaluable aid to the regular red army forces, the soviet communique reported. They were marching with Vatutin in his thrust into Rovno province (eastern part of old Poland) and were active on the Black sea coast near Odessa, where they were wrecking German rail facilities. Yesterday two troop trains were derailed, 200 Germans killed, a "large number" of prisoners taken, and 48 guns, together with much war material, were captured.

How to Make a Better Cup of Coffee

EXPERIENCED brewers of really good coffee know there are only a few rules that must be followed:

- 1 They keep their coffee-making equipment CLEAN—washing it daily with soap and hot water, and rinsing it thoroughly.
- 2 They use coffee of the right grind and they use ENOUGH of it—at least a generous tablespoonful for each cup.
- 3 They brew their coffee by the CLOCK, timing it exactly to get results they know from experience will be most satisfactory.
- 4 They buy coffee which is GOOD and FRESH—choosing quality because they know a pound will average about 40 cupsful, demanding freshness because stalesness is coffee's greatest enemy.

If the coffee you make "leaves something to be desired", try those four simple rules!
