THE EAST of the spearhead of the Russian column that is driving into Poland farther to the south and possibly had to be wiped out to remove the threat of a German flanking attack.

Your map, if carefully studied, will make this situation quite clear.

THE dispatches state that the hardest and MOST CRUCIAL fighting is east of Vinnitsa, where the Russians are striking at the Odessa railroad and the Germans are counterattacking viciously.

The cutting of the Odessa railroad looks like the next REALLY BIG achievement in Russia.

THE Russians are dickering with the Polish government-in-exile in London over what is to happen to Poland after the war.

Stalin apparently proposes to hold that part of former Poland lying east of the 1939 boundary (established by Russian-German agreement before Germany went to war with Russia) and referred to generally in the dispatches as the Curzon line. In return for the slice of eastern Poland thus taken, the Russians are offering to give the Poles part of eastern Germany—INCLUDING part of Prussia.

(KEEP your eye on this Prussian proposal. Prussia has always been the nerve center of the German war-and-conquest complex. Maybe the Russians have in mind an operation to REMOVE Prussia from the body of Germany.)

THE latest reports from our air headquarters in England indicate that Tuesday's air battle cost the Germans 152 planes shot down as well as three fighter plane factories damaged. Of the fighter planes shot down, our BOMBER gunners got 125 and our fighters 27.

We are supposed to have had about 700 heavy bombers and some 500 fighters in the battle. These figures indicate the DEADLINESS of our bomber gunners.

A sidelight in the news is the statement from Seattle that hereafter the PAINT is to be left off Flying Fortreses, thus saving 60 pounds of weight to be added to the bomb load.

ON the growingly turbulent political home front, there are charges that the budget presented by President Roosevelt to congress was PADDED to allow for more boondoggle spending).

Budgets being as complicated and technical as they are, padding is pretty hard to prevent. About the only real protection is a chief executive who WON'T PAD BUDGETS, but instead will TRIM them.

The day after the war ends, budget trimming will be our most vitally important problem.

WASHINGTON is still fighting the soldier vote battle. The issue is whether the federal government or the states will control the soldier vote machinery.

It's ALL politics.

Whoever thinks his side will get the bulk of the soldier vote will want federal control, so that more soldiers can be enabled to vote. Whoever thinks his side WON'T get the soldier vote will be for state control, so that fewer soldiers can vote.

THE INCOME TAX BLANK

By Charles V. Stanton

WE believe we have an average vocabulary, but we must admit we don't know enough words, including the profane, to properly express our opinion of the current federal income tax form. News-Review readers must know by now that our personal dislike for the current political administration borders on the fanatic—maybe crosses the borderline—but if anything would drive a person deeper into black hatred for the outfit in power, it would be the form which most of us have recently received through the mail. How anyone could vote to continue in power an administration that would permit such a blank to be placed in the hands of the general public is something we simply can't understand.

If anyone had told us the national capital's muddling, bungling and confusion could be put on paper and distributed to millions of American citizens we wouldn't have believed it. But now we've seen it!

Here we are a nation of people consumed with anxiety over the safety of loved ones, our nerves rasped by overwork, our patience exhausted with political mismanagement and the acts of irresponsible labor leaders, and then the administration comes out with an income tax form that would whiten the hair of the proverbial Philadelphia lawyer. But, at least, it's a diversion.

Ruml came up with a simplified, pay-as-you-go tax plan. The administration opposed it, but congress passed it anyway. Now we get a sour-grapes tax form.

We doubt if very many American citizens object to the payment of a stiff income tax. We fully realize we can't fight a war of the magnitude of the current struggle without having an enormous bill to pay. The bill wouldn't be so high if the administration hadn't practically bankrupt the nation with its previous extravagances, and even now, with the war cost pyramiding our national debt, we are still in the midst of the orgy of unessential administrative spending. But we accept the fact that having permitted this condition, it is now up to us to pay the bill. But it seems that when the burden of paying the tax is so heavy, there should be some relief in the method of calculating the payment.

Attorney Guy Cordon, who has been back to Washington so often he has discovered how to find a hotel room, related to us the method by which these returns are made.

Congress first passes a tax bill. The measure then goes to a tax expert, employed by the senate, who, incidentally, gets paid twice as much as any senator. He checks the bill for any possible technical errors, and it then goes to the executive branch and is switched over to the treasury department.

In the treasury a group of tax experts go to work. The only language they know is the idiom peculiar to their profession. They are familiar with all the loopholes used by tax evaders and can imagine a lot of things that need to be done to prevent other openings. And so they proceed to write the forms in a language as unfamiliar to the average person as Sanskrit, and with as many dependent clauses as their combined efforts can invent.

The American citizen has been called upon to perform many patriotic acts for the sake of his country in the past few months. We have given our sons and daughters into military service, we have set an astounding production record, we have oversubscribed our war bond quotas, we have skimped on gasoline, contributed to war chests, saved our fats, bones, metal, waste paper and toothpaste tubes; we have struggled with ration points, ration banking, priorities and certificates of necessity, but the hero's medal belongs to the guy who can correctly fill out the current tax blank.

Word Received of Death in Chicago of C. R. Shipman

Word was received here today of the death of C. R. Shipman in Chicago Jan. 8. Though Mr. Shipman has been in the east for nearly twenty years he will be remembered by many Douglas county residents as the owner of the large "Glenbrook Farms" south of Riddle. Mrs. Shipman is still in Chicago.

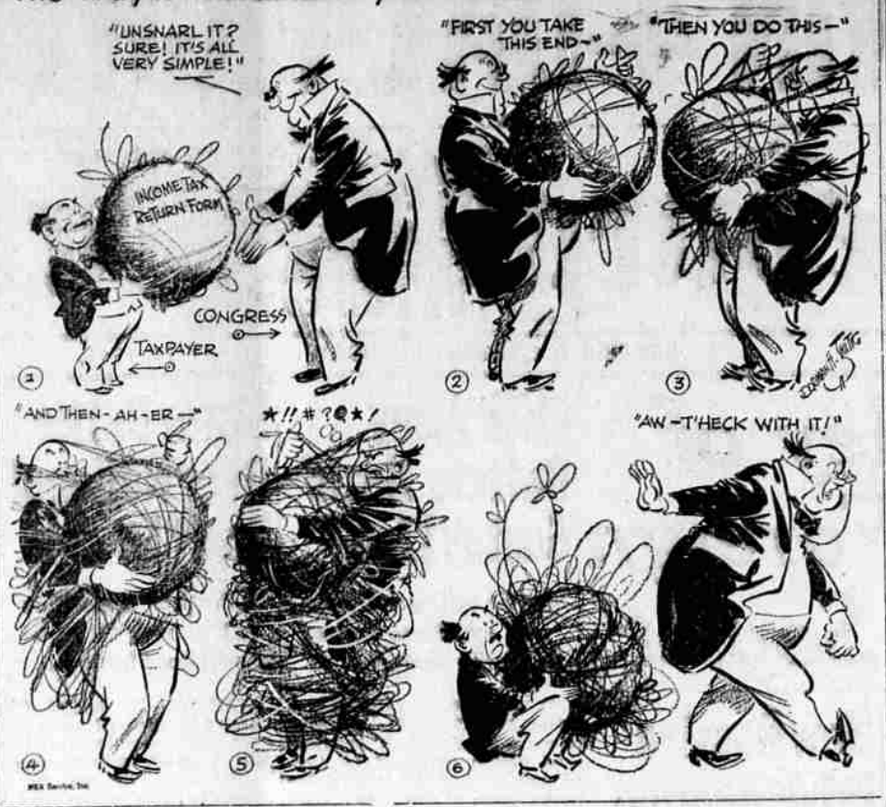
The Way It Will Probably Work Out



Farmers Advised On Allotment of Burlap Bag Buys

Farmers in the states of Oregon, Idaho and Washington using burlap bags for their wheat and small grains will be allowed to purchase 100 per cent of the bags they bought in the base period of 1941, it was announced today by Taylor Greene, district War Production board director.

In an amendment to conservation order M-221, WPB provides that the West coast wheat bag may be used for packaging small grains, and changes the base for bag purchases, in order to meet increased demands on the part of the farmer not using bulk storage.

The amendment further extends the scope of the order to include open mesh cotton bags along with burlap bags. Burlap laminated bags are also subject to the restrictions. New burlap bags may now be used to cover smaller refined sugar bags, such as shelf packages, it was announced.

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN

Hurry! hurry! If it's close to 6 o'clock, be sure that old radio's a-humming, because here comes the big parade of stars and celebrities to inaugurate the 4th War Loan drive with a full hour show. You'll miss Gabe Heatter, Robert Ripley, Paul and Jerry, just for tonight, but you'll be well repaid in listening pleasure. Don't forget tonight is Sherlock Holmes at 8—and by the way, this is the last night the dean of detectives will be on at this time. He moves to 10 o'clock Monday nights, beginning next week. You'll remember, of course, that you have a date with Point Sublime at 8:30.

Tuesday night at 10 o'clock the state of Oregon's 4th War Loan drive is given a big boost, when you hear the broadcast from Portland. KRNR stays on the air for an extra half-hour to bring you the big doings. Tuesday evening at 6:15 also marks the start of Believe It Or Not, a nightly feature now, Mondays through Friday, with the unbelievable Mr. Ripley himself doing the honors.

A Remarkable Proclamation

THIS WEEK is the tenth anniversary of the occasion when Olympia bottled and draft beer made its first public appearance after repeal.

It seems a fitting occasion to republish the original business policy proclamation of the Olympia Brewing Company established by its founder, Leopold F. Schmidt, in 1896.

OLYMPIA BREWING COMPANY

To All Engaged in Making and Distributing the Products of this Company:

This organization has two aims:

First—To have its products—Olympia Beer, Olympia Malt Extract and Olympia Artesian Spring Water—and the packages in which these are marketed—as nearly perfect as it is possible to make them.

Second—To maintain an equally high practise in the sale and distribution of these products.

Any official, dealer or employe who does not live up to the standard of this two-fold policy is not doing his duty as a man nor to the industry in which we all make our livelihood.

Quality First; Quantity Next

We ask every employe to at all times perform his work as directed, striving earnestly for the standards we have set.

Constant co-operation is imperative to keep clean, presentable and orderly all brewing and bottling utensils, buildings, premises, workshops, tools, storage rooms, offices, records, dispensing apparatus and merchandise on its way to the consumer.

It is by united endeavor all along the line that we make and sell our products "cleanly."

Employes of good character, careful and alive to their work, seldom remain unrewarded in any business, and it is intended they shall not in this one.

Strong public sentiment exists against the manufacture and sale of beer, our principal product.

This sentiment is due to:

First—Bad conditions that have in the past existed in the retailing of beer and other liquors.

Second—Confusion of the drinking of beer with that of liquors containing higher percentages of alcohol.

Third—Excessive use of alcoholic beverages.

It behooves all of us to keep the marketing of Olympia Beer at a high standard and to inform the public of its purity, low alcohol-content and beneficent properties.

We must above all keep our personal conduct above reproach.

OLYMPIA BREWING COMPANY

This is a copy of the original proclamation which for three generations has been rigidly adhered to.

The Olympia Brewing Company originated the first light table beer in America. It is a distinct type—a mild refreshing beer—that soon became famous for quality and flavor. Added perfection is obtained by our exclusive subterranean water which improves every process of brewing.
