state of your health. You're hoping fervently that everything will be all right, but you can't escape that uneasy, sinking feeling in the pit of your stomach.

Maybe everything WON'T be all right. What then? The sensations are similar when you get the verdict. If everything is rosy, you go away stepping high, with a burden lifted from your soul.

But why go into that? There's tragedy enough in this war world, without adding to it needlessly.

It may be that you're among the lucky ones. You have a room. Your baggage is parked in it. You're in POSSESSION—and you'd like to see the color of the hair of the man who could take it away from you.

You stow your duffel, lock the door—and test it carefully to see that it IS locked, so that nobody can sneak in while you're away and jump your claim—and stroll down to the lobby to see how the battle goes.

You find you've been more fortunate than the average. You see other poor devils, their shoulders slumping under adversity and the light of desperation in their eyes, getting the doleful shake of the head from the room clerk and marching out into the night and the storm.

Do your eyes dim with pity? Does your heart ache for these poor unfortunates with their blasted hopes?

THE answer, alas, is "NO! PERIOD."

Instead of the sympathetic heart tug and the feeling of humility that became one in the presence of another human being upon whom the hard hand of fate has been laid heavily, the sensation you are most acutely aware of is one of SMUGNESS. You practically wriggle with happiness because it is you and not he that got the break.

Human nature has a long way yet to go before the goal of perfection is reached.

THE plain and simple and unadorned truth is that the hotels in every city that has even a moderate measure of war activity are SWAMPED with business. They have to spend more time turning customers away than they have left to spend on those they can accommodate.

Yet one must say for the hotel people as a whole that they are taking this unhealthy state of affairs in stride and are not losing their sense of balance. Courtesy is much more the rule than the exception. Service, while stripped of its fluffy non-essentials, remains surprisingly good. It is generally given with a smile.

One has the heartening feeling that the hotel industry will come out of this period of too much business and too little help and raw materials without losing its most priceless asset, which is the spirit of hospitality and the desire to serve the traveling public well.

PROFITEERING FARMERS

By Charles V. Stanton

WE hear a great deal from Washington these days about the enormous profits being made by the farmer. We read of activities of the so-called "farm bloc," which Congressman Harris Ellsworth recently referred to as a myth—a non-existent bloc to which propagandists can point with cries of "special privilege" and "fascism," as they try to cover up the mismanagement and political finagling of domestic administration.

If we weren't so well acquainted with farmers and know them to be hard-working, patriotic men and women, who are striving earnestly, in face of almost overpowering handicaps, to carry their heavy responsibility in the war effort, we might be led to believe they were a disreputable class of war profiteers, deliberately out to upset the balance of our national economy for the purpose of lining their own pocketbooks.

But we have yet to find a farmer who is getting rich from the war. Fred A. Goff, chairman of the Douglas County Pomona Grange agricultural committee, recently pointed out some very pertinent facts in his annual report. Among other things Chairman Goff said:

"All those engaged in agriculture have been working overtime and the production record in this county shows definite results. Agriculture can definitely take its place with the industries in our nation when it comes to actual results of production.

"On account of many obstacles to overcome—scarcity of labor, costs of materials, and transportation conditions—the net return to the producer has not been equal to that of other years, even though prices received in many cases are much higher. As a result of this, the false impression is given to the public when the reports are given out through the press, that the agricultural income is so many billion dollars greater than that of other years and that the farmers are coining money greater than ever before.

"As agriculture is not organized on a basis whereby it can give statistics showing cost of production to offset gross receipts, we are placed in an unfair situation when it comes to such references.

"Many dairymen and poultrymen have had to go out of business entirely or cut down their production to the minimum so that they could handle their business themselves and not carry on on a losing basis. The farmer is asked to accept subsidies so that he will keep on producing, even though at a loss. We can not see how this will lower the cost of living, for, after all, who will pay the subsidies? The answer is—the same ones who are doing the producing. Thus, they are merely saddled with more expense which will be taken eventually from their income and with greater debt that must be met by someone in the production industry sooner or later."

Fred Goff's report contains meat for some very serious thought. Records covering population shifts in Oregon during the period of the emergency show a very large drop in the rural areas and marked gains in the cities, particularly the industrial centers. Farmers are not going to leave their farms if they are making the profits our political propagandists, who are trying to foist subsidies on the American public, would have us believe. The next time you read of some political brass-hat lambasting the farmer and the "farm bloc," go out and visit one of your farmer friends and ask him how much of the "enormous farm profit" he has been able to garner.

Oregon Board Prepares Drive on Bootlegging

PORTLAND, Jan. 27—(AP)—A drive against bootlegging was prepared today by the Oregon liquor control commission, which said speakeasies were more numerous in Portland than at any time since prohibition.

Although operators have been convicted numerous times for the illegal sale of liquor on evidence gathered by commission inspectors, they continue in business, Administrator Ray Conway charged. Conway and G. B. Lilly, Baker, commission chairman, urged stiff jail sentences in addition to present fines.

City law enforcement officials agreed to join the commission in the drive.

Move To Roseburg—Mr. and Mrs. George Churchill and sons, Tom and Frank, have arrived in Roseburg from Waldport and are making their home at present with Mr. Churchill's mother, Mrs. Frank Churchill on South Kane street. Mr. Churchill is with the Umpqua Forest service. The family formerly made their home in Roseburg.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS There are two forces at work in the world, one that drags down and one that lifts up. The evil and sins of the world have a mighty downpull on our moral and spiritual natures. In fact, the power of evil to degrade and destroy the soul of man is such that man would utterly perish were it not for the lifting power of God through Christ and His cross. How we feel the dead weight of sin today! But the positive forces of the world are stronger than the negative. Christ had this in mind when He said: "I will draw all men unto me. The upward pull of Christ is stronger than the downward pull of sin. Christ was uplifted on the Cross to die for the sins of the world, even mine and yours. He has, since then, been lifted up in the Christian lives of millions of His followers. He wants us to lift Him up today in our homes, our community, our daily lives, in love and brotherhood around the earth. As steel yields to the magnet, may we yield our lives to the magnet of the Christ who is drawing us His way for He is "the way, the truth, and the life." Amen.

National Head of Eagles to Visit Roseburg Aerie

Roseburg aerie of the Eagles lodge will have the privilege Tuesday, Feb. 1, of entertaining, for the first time in five years, the grand worthy president of the order, Robert W. Hansen, who in addition to holding the highest national office of the lodge is also the editor-in-chief of The Eagle Magazine, will pay an official visit to the Roseburg lodge and will be the principal speaker at the meeting.

Born in Wisconsin, Mr. Hansen was graduated from Marquette university in 1933. He was editor of the University Law Review while taking his law course and in 1930 was winner of the Wisconsin Intercollegiate Peace Oratorical contest. Since admission to the bar he has devoted much of his legal practice to labor groups, serving as general counsel for the Milwaukee Carpenters district council and as legal representative for the Milwaukee Government Service league.

He has served as a special assistant attorney general in enforcement of the fair trade practice law, and as chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Milwaukee county council of the American Red Cross and as senior civilian war services advisor of the office of civilian defense. He was selected by the junior chamber of commerce as Milwaukee's outstanding young man for 1940. Mr. Hansen's affiliation with the Fraternal Order of Eagles began in 1935. In 1938, at the age of 27, he became the youngest president in the history of the Milwaukee aerie. He was elected grand trustee in 1940 and was made national vice-president in 1942. Last summer he took over the duties of the national president and editor-in-chief of the fraternity's national publication.

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN

Here's a quick reminder—just in case your radio isn't humming all ready—Congressman Harris Ellsworth speaks tonight at 6:45, and, of course, you'll remember that tonight is your Thursday edition of Music You Remember—words and music by Annaloris. Now on to Friday, which means Double or Nothing at 6:30 and Name That Song at 8:30. You're probably tired of being urged to listen to them when you all ready had planned to, so we'll pass over it very lightly today. We just read some interesting publicity on Bob (Believe It or Not) Ripley, which is believe it or not in itself. He draws his cartoons upside down, owns five automobiles and can't drive a car, that's not so unusual in these days; we know lots of people who have trouble driving one with gas and rubber being what they are. Mr. Ripley, however, has been in China more often than in his own New York City offices, and has visited more countries than any other human being who ever lived.

Dale Carnegie is bringing you little known facts about Joseph Stalin at 7 on Friday, and that's the night we stay on the air for an extra half-hour to air Freedom of Opportunity, which is excellent listening by the way, so be sure to listen in at 10 o'clock tomorrow night.

Health Clinic Held At Fullerton School

The regular county health clinic was held at the Fullerton school Tuesday, with Dr. E. J. Wainscott, county health doctor, and Mrs. Litter, county health nurse, in charge. Mrs. Al Balford and Mrs. Fred Chapman assisted the health officers. The immunizations, which were offered to all students, included vaccination for smallpox, toxoid for diphtheria, Schick test, and tubercular skin test. Rose and Fullerton grade schools had previously held clinics. The next clinic will be held Tuesday, January 25, at Drain.
