luxuries of life, you go into the matrix with a more or less detailed mental concept of what you want. That is a hangover from those now rather remote days when the supply of goods exceeded the demand, and as a result the buyer had a rather considerable range of choice.

No matter how you approach the transaction, you wind up by taking what you can get and liking it. (The chances are that by the time you get around to telling somebody about it you'll be bragging inordinately over having got anything at all.)

THE buyer's reaction to this general situation are at this moment immaterial. There are plenty of buyers. They're like air and water—the supply seemingly unlimited. They're just taken for granted.

It's the SELLER'S reactions that are interesting—and, in a way, significant.

How will people who sell things to other people stand up under the strain of this seller's market? What will be the effect of it on their future lives? Will they be able to READJUST themselves when the seller's market finally comes to an end?

TO these questions, about the only answer that will stand the acid test is this:

"Some of them will and some of them won't."

Some of them will drop back readily into the old ways when a customer was a customer and as such to be well treated and given the best at hand for the money he has to spend.

OTHERS will NEVER be able to get back to that sensible and logical frame of mind, but will spend the rest of their lives looking forward to another time when it will be possible for ANYBODY to get by, whether he has anything on the ball or not.

These latter ones will be the unfortunates of the postwar period.

IT'S possible now to look forward and spot with a reasonable margin of error the successes and the failures of the years to come.

Among the sure-fire successes will be those who, in these seller's market days, with supply short and demand seemingly unlimited, with buyers so numerous and so eager that you can spit in one's eye with the comforting certainty that a dozen others will be along to take whatever you offer, RETAIN THEIR COURTESY and give pleasant, friendly service with every sale.

Among the certain failures will be those snooty, snippy feather-brains whose attitude toward the buying public is "take it or leave it, and just see if I care."

TAKING things by and large as one finds them, the amount of courtesy encountered in this biggest seller's market of all times is really a little surprising. There are more courteous sellers than you'd think.

ENLISTING THE WOMEN

By Charles V. Stanton

A FEW weeks ago we printed in this column some interesting letters concerning the failure of women to fill quotas set by recruiting departments of the several auxiliaries to the branches of military service. This same subject is discussed in a recent editorial in The Oregonian, which observes:

It is a grievous conclusion, but inescapable, that the young women of America are not measuring up to the part assigned to them in this war. This is not a reflection upon the efficiency and the patriotism of thousands of women in the military services, in vital war industries and in civilian defense. They have proved their metal and their worth. It is an indictment of millions of complacent women who could and should be serving, but who are not.

The Oregonian draws the conclusion that the recruiting lag is, in part, to assurance of allied victory, which has led to a wave of complacency. It also comments upon the fact that men, in uniform and out, as well as parents, are placing obstacles in the way of enlisting of women.

While discussing the question of the recruiting lag among women, we solicited letters from News-Review readers. The response was most pleasing. Included was one from a lady who resides at Riddle. We have been saving her comment for advantageous use and it fits in perfectly with relations to the opinion expressed by The Oregonian.

She says:

First, let me suggest that instead of looking to the women to answer the question, "Why don't women enlist?" try asking the following questions of the male sex: "Would you want your wife, sister or sweetheart to be either a WAC, WAVE or SPAR? If not, why not?" Try this in some army camp. Put the questions on ballot sheets and pass them out. Let each one answer in his own way, without signing his name, and I think you will be surprised at the way they feel about it. Then you will have one reason why women don't enlist, because after all we do cater to the whims of the dominant male.

We have been greatly interested in this subject since it was first brought to our attention by a recruiting officer. We cannot share with The Oregonian its opinion that "It is not too late for the women who look upon this war with lofty detachment to pitch in and mend the disgraceful record." We do not believe there is anything disgraceful about the record the women have made. Rather we believe the fault lies with the recruiting services in failure to set age limits which would reach those who are best able to serve.

Our correspondent from Riddle states this factor in a most interesting manner. She says:

A great many girls just out of high school are eager to enter training but, if they have to wait two years, they naturally will take up other work. If these younger girls were taken into training, yes, even drafted, if necessary, and given a year's cadet training in whatever line of work they were best suited for, you would soon have an army of well trained, capable young women. Most women of 20 or over have already chosen their field of employment and have become established in that field and they hesitate to give that up for another field.

Since this subject was first opened we have been approached by a number of girls, 17 and 18 years of age, who are most anxious to get into service. The auxiliaries will have no trouble in filling their quotas if they will lower the age limit to conform to those for men. As it is a well known fact that girls mature mentally and physically at a younger age than do boys, we can see little reason why a girl at 18 is not as thoroughly capable of filling a responsible position in military service as a boy of like age.

The high schools of Douglas county will soon be graduating large classes. We are quite confident many of the girl graduates would be delighted to enlist in the services where they are needed. We are confident because they have told us so. And we also know for a certainty that they are a fine, clean and dependable bunch of girls who would be a credit to the service.

If the recruiting departments want women to fill the places in which they can release men for active service they will do well to lower the age limit to the point that will reach the greatest number of eligible women most anxious to serve.

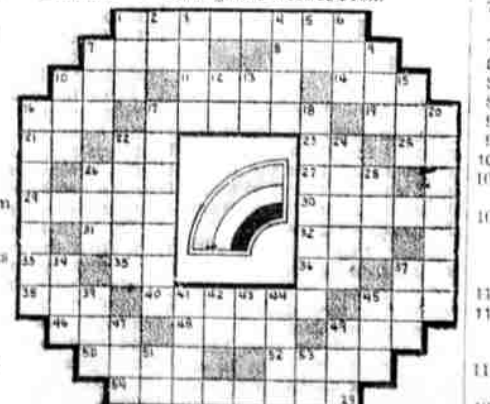

The federal government originally planned to reserve all of Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas and parts of Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota for permanent residences of the Indians.

RHS Basketeers Lose Ragged Tilt To Grants Pass

With both teams playing very ragged ball, the Grants Pass Cavemen trimmed the Roseburg high school Indians, 25 to 16, in a basketball game at Grants Pass last night. The Indians, who have been an in-and-out team so far this season, had one of their "bad nights" in the game last night, and simply couldn't hit baskets.

The game was very rough in the closing phases, but Loomis, Roseburg center, was the only player lost from the game on fouls.

Grants Pass had a 4 to 1 lead at the quarter and was out in front 11 to 7 at half time. The lead was stretched to eight points, 19 to 11, as the game went into the final period, Grants Pass adding six points and Roseburg five in the last quarter.

The two teams play again tonight.

Lineups:
Grants Pass 25/Pos 16 Roseburg
Reibel 2 F 3 Young
Furchner 10 F 10 Wiley
Smith 7 C 2 Loomis
Auland 4 G 5 Cummings
Lutz 2 G 2 Kreil

Substitutions: Roseburg — James 1, Pippin 2, Marr 1.

"Best Bets" was completely out of hand today—there were so many good shows to call to your attention. We had to cut and cut, so we'd urge you to read the hole of Saturday's program very carefully so you won't miss any of the regular features; and note specially the changes in time and the special broadcasts scheduled during the day. Chicago Theatre presents "Naughty Marietta" this week. You all know this one—no need to remind you of the grand music you'll be hearing. Here is one special program to note, however: Bondwagon at 7:20 has been expanded to 40 minutes and will present heroes of the "Golden Age of Sports"—such as Dempsey, Ruth, Grange, Jones and so on. California Melodies will be on for just 15 minutes and then—at 8:15—we go in to the big four-network show that salutes the President on his birthday. Just note this array of talent—Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra, Frances Langford, Lily Pons, Dinah Shore—those are some of the outstanding names. Paul Whiteman and Alex Stordahl's orchestras, the Marine band and the Air Force band will furnish the music—so, here's a million dollar entertainment that's yours! Just for the flip of the switch. It will run a full hour from 8:15 until 9:15—and then you'll hear your Newspaper of the Air. Don't overlook any of the other good shows that are regularly scheduled for Saturday. They're all right there—and, since this is Friday, remember there's some mighty good entertainment on 1490 right now.

Coast Lumbermen Join To Handle Labor Cases

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Jan. 28. (AP)—The Oregon Coast Lumber Operators association will assist lumbermen from Bandon to Florence in handling their labor relations.

The new organization will be headed by David Miller, Bandon, as president; Ray Jeub, Coquille, vice-president; Phillip Gilbert, Marshfield, treasurer, and E. H. Card, formerly with the Willamette Valley Lumbermen's association, secretary-manager. Offices will be in Marshfield.
