AGRICULTURE'S FUTURE

By Charles V. Stanton

DOUGLAS COUNTY'S future lies in industrialization rather than in agriculture, according to the economic survey recently compiled by the Bonneville Power administration. The economists and engineers who conducted the study foresee only limited increase in farm population. They point out there is some room for increased farm residence in the fact that Douglas county's farms average about twice as many acres per farm as in the adjoining counties to the north and south, which will permit some increase through improved land utilization. Principal agricultural gains are anticipated in sheep, cattle and poultry, particularly sheep, as additional grazing lands are cleared through conversion of logged over lands into pasture. Minor gains are anticipated as a result of increased urban populations, thus providing improved outlets for the products of market gardens, poultry and poultry products, dairying, etc., but, as a whole, the agricultural picture is not to be materially altered, in the opinion of the economists.

"Timber is the key to the future in Douglas county. Likely developments in agriculture, food processing, fishing, and mining are outweighed by the tremendous potentialities for wood-using industries," the report declares. While industrial expansion obviously is to be predominant in the immediate future, we must not overlook the fact that Douglas county's existence in past years has depended entirely upon agriculture and that agriculture remains of great importance, although from the standpoint of total income it has been surpassed by the timber industry.

In 1940, according to the Bonneville report, one-third of the working population was employed on farms. Although the number of agricultural workers declined from 3,297 in 1930 to 2,723 in 1940, the rural farm population increased from 9,366 to 10,057 and the number of farms from 2,488 to 2,734.

Farm income in 1943 is believed to have set an all-time high of around six million dollars, although net income, due to higher production costs, was not in normal proportion to the gross receipts.

In the industrial era forecast by the Bonneville report, the working population employed on farms will amount to only about one-tenth, instead of one-third, of the total number of employed persons. Wood-using industries will account for about one-third of the total employment, while service industries will employ approximately one-half.

Income levels in Douglas county have been relatively low in past years. In 1939, the last year for which census figures were available, gross agricultural income was $339 per capita of rural population as compared with a state average of $420. At the same time the average wage for employees engaged in industry was $966, substantially less than the state average of $1,190 for the same industries.

Being strictly an agricultural community there was little competition for workers in industry nor was labor organized. In the coming years there will be keener competition for industrial workers. Labor unions will demand rates of pay on a parity with like industries in other parts of the state. This will result in a material improvement in the relative level of industrial payrolls. The greater circulation of money in the industrial centers, in turn, should serve to improve markets for agricultural products and thus raise the per capita income of the farmer.

The Bonneville report, and our acute interest in the industrialization of the county in which our future welfare obviously lies, are apt to cause us to overlook our old friend agriculture, which, after all, has been our chief support these many years. While the outlook for agriculture is not as rosy as in the industrial field, yet it brought in last year around six million dollars, and that's not hay. Furthermore, agricultural income is far more stable than is industrial income. So in our planning for the future we should not neglect a helping hand to agriculture simply because in our fickle way we are centering our affections on industry.

Recall Move Against Idaho Governor Dropped

BOISE, Idaho, Feb. 17.—(AP)—The attempt to recall Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen has been abandoned by the Idaho Independent Voters league.

Recall Move Against Idaho Governor Dropped

Its secretary, Harold C. Howell, said, however, "circulation of petitions will be continued in order to build the league as a factor in the coming primary and general elections."

The recall move was begun last spring after the legislature repealed the senior citizens grant act, previously enacted by the initiative at the 1942 election. It would have provided a variety of services for persons over 60 years including cash payments.

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN

The pilot of the famous Fortress, The Swoose, will be saluted as one of America's outstanding young men on Friday night's Freedom of Opportunity at 10 o'clock. Lt. Col. Frank Kurtz, former Olympic high diver, is the young man. His story should be an interesting one to say the least. We seem to have gotten started in reverse, since the ten o'clock show is the last one on Friday night, so, beginning now in the a. m., we'd like to mention What's Wrong, 9:45; Sentimental Music, 1:30, and then dropping down again to the evening hours there's our favorite Double or Nothing at 6:30. We're quiz-show fans, but this one continues to be our favorite, since there's more variety than any of the others boast. Don't forget that it's 6:30 on Friday, Eye Witness News at 8, Here Come the Band at 8:15 and Name That Song at 8:30, this week with glamorous Lynn Barry as guest contestant. All this, of course, for tomorrow, but don't forget there are plenty of good shows for tonight too—Music You Remember, 6:30; Army Air Force, 7:30; Pick and Pat Time, 8, and at 8:30 there's Hu-an Adventure. So there will be lots of good listening coming your way from right now on in.

Basketball Game Raises Funds for Injured Player

ARDMORE, Okla., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Everybody paid admission to the Ardmore-Lawton high school basketball game here last night, even the coaches, officials and players themselves.

That was because the proceeds—$1,000—will go to Billy Clements, 15-year-old Ardmore high school football player who suffered a broken neck last fall and has since been paralyzed. The money will be used to send him to a hospital, where treatment of his condition is a specialty.

Lawton won the game, 37 to 35, but nobody cared much about that.

Beacon Hill in Boston got its name from Colonial times when a beacon was lighted to signal the approach of hostile Indians.
