POET'S CORNER

THE BALLAD OF A YOUNG MAN

By ALDEN HARNESSE

Nevada Nigers, feeding tigers At a circus in Raanong, Got flitted badly by Bell Bradley; Then his boss discharged him soon.

Bastinadoed and strapped in In mental ways he seemed to be, Till joy and laughter, two days after,

From dejection set him free. Above the ocean, with emotion, In the blues far away,

Through softest sky-land to an island In his plane he flew one day, In shacks of myrtle, built on fertile

Terrain near a deep defile, He was dwelling, when loud yelling Revealed invasion of that isle.

Where smoke-clouds hovered, he discovered That atrocious, fiendish hordes Were crucifying and applying Torture-instruments and swords.

Inspiration and elation Within a mountain glen afar, Quickly reached him and be-seached him

To fight alone there in this war, With bow and arrow by the narrow Valleys fringed with tropic trees,

To undying Germans frying He sends the brutal Japanese.

A BAD EFFECT

By ORPHA COLLINS

He tried to sing about "Maltzy Doots"

But he couldn't make expenses; The first day out he lost his mind And almost all of his senses.
