he would return to Stockholm, he answered: "I've been here too long already."

LOOKING at Italy, the Finns obviously wonder which could be worse—to surrender, as the Italians did, or to go on fighting.

Tokyo broadcast says Truk impressed the Jap people more than any other development since the war's outbreak.

Don't jump to hasty conclusions. It probably hardens their resolution to fight, as a Jap victory now would harden ours.

The Japs aren't anywhere near licked yet.

THE talking war news is EXTREMELY significant. On Tuesday Churchill told the house of commons that the allies (U. S., Britain and Russia) STAND UNITED on war plans which make victory certain.

The next day Stalin says: "ALL German attempts to introduce disharmony into the camp of the anti-Hitler coalition are doomed to failure."

YOU must have noted Churchill's virtual SIDING IN WITH RUSSIA on the Polish are "reasonable and just."

Note how quickly (almost cordially) Stalin responds. You won't be far wrong if you conclude that Britain has accepted the inevitable and will AGREE to Russian dominance of eastern Europe.

STALIN says: "It should now be clear to ALL that Hitlerite Germany is advancing toward catastrophe."

Then he adds: "But we must be vigilant and avoid over-confidence or complacency. There has never been a case in the history of war when the enemy has jumped into an abyss of his own accord. He must be PUSHED IN."

"That is to say, we must LICK the Germans."

SO much for the war on the fighting fronts. An equally bitter (though less actually bloody) war is being waged on our home political front in Washington.

FDR vetoes the tax bill (written by congress) and touches off an explosion on Capitol Hill.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, (up to now thick-and-thin Roosevelt follower) terms the veto a "deliberate and calculated assault on the integrity of congress" and RESIGNS as Democratic leader of the senate.

He gets an ovation. Democrats and Republicans alike file past his desk to shake him by the hand. The next day the Democrats REFUSED his resignation and re-elected him unanimously.

In the house, the reaction to the veto was equally violent and bitter and its overriding result.

It seems a mess. But we must remember that this is a PART of a historic struggle between the administration and congress.

In general, the administration

KEEP FOREST RESEARCH

By Charles V. Stanton

THE continuing battle for federal funds with which to adequately finance the Forest Products laboratory at Madison, Wis., is again before congress in current consideration of the budget bureau's recommendation.

This laboratory is the principal institution in the United States conducting experiments and research connected with our forests. Its continued, unimpeded operation is of the greatest importance in maintaining most efficient use of our forest resources and in development of methods of profitably utilizing wood wastes.

"For over a decade, the House Subcommittee has repeatedly reduced the budget recommendation," says a formal statement issued by Representative timber interests. "Such action has necessitated much subsequent effort to persuade the Senate and the conferees to restore all or part of the reduction and has resulted in a trend of attritional reduction of the appropriation below the budget recommendation. On the other hand, the trend for research on agricultural farm appropriations for scientific research on other materials for war purposes have been enormously expanded."

It is difficult for us sometimes to understand congress. Here in the West we are deeply interested in our timber resources and are impatient with those who would cut appropriations for one of the most essential functions connected with full development and utilization of those resources. Therefore, we are disturbed by current recommendations for still further reductions in the Forest Products laboratory appropriation.

We must remember, however, that the majority of our congressmen are simply representative citizens. They are provincial, just as we are. We doubt if many congressmen who live east of the Mississippi river have ever been west of that stream. To the midwest farmer, whose principal interests are in raising hogs and corn, it is foolish to spend a lot of money learning how to grow and utilize trees. A tree to him is something you plant around the house to break the force of dust-laden winds.

The western and southern states, producing 83 per cent of the country's lumber, have only 30 per cent of the representation in the Senate and the House. Interests in the cotton industry outweighs timber in the minds of many southern congressmen. Preponderance of representation in congress is from states having little commercial timber. Some congressmen, perhaps, have never seen a tree except in parks. In fact they have so little timber in the East that when a tree grows in Brooklyn they write a book about it.

Yet congress was told by the joint committee on forestry that timber is one of the world's most valuable and versatile raw materials. It is particularly important to this country which uses nearly half the lumber, more than half the paper, and two-fifths of the wood in all forms used in the world.

We are just entering an era of wood chemistry. Utilization of wood for plastics, alcohol, sugar, protein feeds, fabrics, cellulose products, etc., is in its infancy. We need all the research it is possible to obtain. Appropriations for experimentation should be increased rather than decreased. The gain to the nation through conversion of materials now being wasted into consumer goods will more than justify the cost.

represents the NEW IDEAS of centralized government—largely by executive decree—that are sweeping the world, while congress, however feebly, stands by the older American idea of government by elected representatives of the people.

Be SURE of YOUR THINKING before lining up in this fight. Its outcome will affect vitally the lives of your children and your children's children.

Soy Bean Meal's Value as Chick Starter Shown

Successful feeding experiments conducted by the poultry department at Oregon State college that show how soy bean meal can be substituted for most of the previously used animal proteins in chick starter rations bring good news to poultrymen harassed with feed troubles, reports County Agent J. Roland Parker.

Detailed information on these feed trials has been sent direct to all Oregon feed dealers by the station and is also available to any interested poultryman, says Mr. Parker.

In reporting on the results of the test, J. A. Harper, research assistant at the college, says that soy bean meal when adequately supplemented will replace much of the animal protein in chick starting rations. In the college experiments it was supplemented with distillers' dry solubles and with dry live yeast. By using these it was possible to reduce the pounds of animal protein in a ton of mash from 181 pounds per ton to amounts ranging from only 26 to 52 pounds without harmful effect on the growth of the chicks. In one experimental ration the amount of animal protein was even reduced to five pounds per ton with approximately the same rate of growth being shown.

One important factor discovered, according to Harper, is that the method of preparation of the soy bean oil meal has considerable effect on its feeding efficiency. In processing the meal it is necessary that it be heated at the correct temperature to make available the maximum amount of protein.

In the experiments conducted at the college, eight lots of day-old chicks were fed the various rations for eight weeks. They were given free access to the mash at all times and, after the first week, had access to chick scratch grains, and after the fourth week to developing scratch. Granite grit was kept before the chicks after the fourth day of breeding.

R. H. S. Cagers Set For 2-Game Card With Grants Pass

The Roseburg high school basketball team meets Grants Pass at the local gymnasium tonight and Saturday in the last scheduled games of the season. The Indians will wind up their season by participating in the district tournament at Ashland, March 3 and 4, with the right to enter the state championship tournament at Salem as the prize.

Roseburg and Grants Pass teams have had much the same record for this season, playing in-and-out ball in nearly all of their games. The Indians, at times, have demonstrated championship caliber, but have been unable to sustain a winning pace and Grants Pass has made a similar showing.

The Cagemen will need two victories over Roseburg to reach a tie for the cellar spot. If the Indians can win one victory out of the two games, the win will shove Grants Pass into the cellar for keeps.

Klamath Falls is leading the league with 12 wins and 4 losses and has played all of its scheduled games. Ashland with 11 wins and 4 losses and Medford with 8 wins and 7 losses, play tonight. If Ashland wins the Grizzlies and Pelicans will be tied for the league leadership. Roseburg has 4 wins and 10 losses and Grants Pass has 2 wins and 12 losses and the two teams have two games, tonight and Saturday, remaining on the schedule.

There is a possibility, Coach Hod Turner stated, that Grants Pass and Roseburg will be forced to play an elimination contest Thursday of next week to determine which will enter the district tournament, as there is a move on foot to provide a four-team meeting at Ashland, and with five teams in the district it may be decided to eliminate one of the two last place teams prior to the start of the tournament. In the event Roseburg wins the two games here this weekend, it may be decided to arbitrarily eliminate Grants Pass.

Air Hero's Second Marriage Faces Contest Threat

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Feb. 25. (AP)—The marriage of Capt. Vincent B. Evans, 22, of decorated bombardier of the Flying Fortress "Memphis Belle," and 23-year-old Irma Salzman has been disclosed here.

The Rev. A. C. Melton performed the ceremony Sunday night. He and Miss Salzman, also known as Jean James, gave their addresses as in Victorville, Calif.

Evans' attorney in Fort Worth, Tex., recently announced the filer was granted a divorce from Mrs. Dinosa (Dinney) Evans of Las Vegas three weeks ago, in Juarez, Mexico, on grounds of "incompatibility of character."

The first Mrs. Evans, advised of his remarriage, said yesterday she had never been informed that a Mexican divorce had been awarded or had even been filed. She announced through her attorney that she was investigating the possibility of having the decree declared invalid.

Evans, she said, spent several weeks with her here and in Los Angeles prior to the purported Mexican divorce. They were married Aug. 10, 1942, in Walla Walla, Wash., and Evans went overseas after their two-day honeymoon. He was awarded the DFC, air medal and three oak leaf clusters upon completing 25 flying missions.

Uncle Sam Needs Men to make THIS WAR MATERIAL. Are the distillers producing alcohol exclusively for the Government for war material, including high explosives for bombs like those? The Whiskey people boast that they are. They give the impression that distillers are all out for the war effort but that the beer crowd is continuing business as usual. "I looked up a few figures. In peace times to distill beverage alcohol, the distillers employed less than six thousand men. They may have a few more now distilling alcohol for war use but the whole liquor business, beer, wine, whiskey, is using more than 400,000 persons in making and selling booze in war times. Then not one hundred percent of the booze business employees are engaged in war work, but only two or three percent? That's right. At least ninety-seven percent of liquor business employees now are making or selling intoxicants. As usual, the main concern of the liquor crowd is to make more money by selling more liquor to more people regardless of the consequences in absenteeism, inefficiency, crime, misery and accidents."
