KEEP PACE WITH INDUSTRY

By Charles V. Stanton

CONSTRUCTION of a new sawmill is to start at Dillard within 30 days. A small mill is being built a short distance south of Roseburg's city limits. Two mills are planned at Riddle. Consideration is being given a proposed mill at Oakland. A remanufacturing plant is projected at Green. These are only a few of the plans for further increases in Douglas county's rapidly expanding industrial development.

It is easy to remember the sneers of the scoffers a few short months ago, when predictions were made that Douglas county would eventually become the center of the Pacific coast's lumber industry. That day is approaching far more rapidly than even the most sanguine optimists had hoped for.

Observers could easily foresee that necessity would ultimately force the lumber industry to move into Douglas county, but it was not possible to predict that circumstances would so materially advance the development period.

Wood has become one of the most critical of war materials. The number of uses to which it is being put in speeding victory would fill a large volume. Consequently mills everywhere have been working at top capacity to fill the orders created by the war demand. In many localities mills were nearing the end of available timber resources. They had only a few years of life left at normal rate of cutting. But the emergency increased the rate of production until logging areas in sections which heretofore supplied the bulk of the requirements have become exhausted of merchantable timber. Consequently new fields must be sought and far-sighted operators are locating where an abundance of raw material is available.

A man, whose principal business is that of dismantling sawmills and selling used and new machinery and equipment, told us recently that in the last 15 months he had wrecked seven large mills in a Puget Sound area that until a few years ago was the nation's largest producer of lumber and wood products. Even some of the areas in Oregon, where operations have been in progress for a number of years, are facing exhaustion of timber resources.

Another factor speeding industrial development in Douglas county is the change in transportation facilities. Heretofore the bulk of shipping was by way of water routes. Consequently, mills were built on tidewater. The war, however, forced transportation by rail, giving inland mills parity with those along the coast. This factor, working in connection with the rapid cut of timber in established saw mill districts, has worked to speed industrial development of Douglas county.

Industry is beginning to storm the county. The influx of new business has barely begun. Vast changes are certain in coming months. Few people are yet aware of the magnitude of the movement. Douglas county towns will be hard-pressed to keep pace with the necessity for school accommodations, hospitals, sanitary facilities, lighting, streets, police and fire protection and other services expected of municipalities. Not only should there be active planning to meet these needs, but actual steps to begin needed construction or improvements should be taken at the earliest possible date. It will soon be time to prepare budgets for school districts and cities. Those charged with the responsibility of preparing those budgets should anticipate demands for funds and should not let the urge to keep local taxes at the lowest possible figure retard municipal developments.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

You hear a lot of talk about morale these days... but have you found many people who know exactly what "morale" was? Well, I was thumbing through my scrap book the other day, and I came on this verse I'd like to pass on to you. It's the lift you get from a friendly smile... A brand new hat in a jaunty style... A letter from home that the post-man brings... Morale is a lot of little things. Isn't it so? Morale is just a lot of little things. A flower in your button hole, a word of greeting, an occasional refreshing glass of beer with friends. From where I sit, if we take care to preserve these little friendly things that boost morale, we'll be doing a lot to help our country in its time of crisis. And we'll boost morale among our soldiers at the front, too. Because it's these "important little things" that they look forward to returning to.

Woman's Clubs to Aid in Effort of Waves Enlistment

Helping the U. S. navy enlist Waves has been adopted as a No. 1 war project by the Roseburg Woman's club, Roseburg Junior Woman's club and Roseburg Bellview club among the 150 women's groups in the Oregon Federation of Women's clubs, which have formally pledged support to this vital and urgent program, yesterday reported presidents of these clubs here.

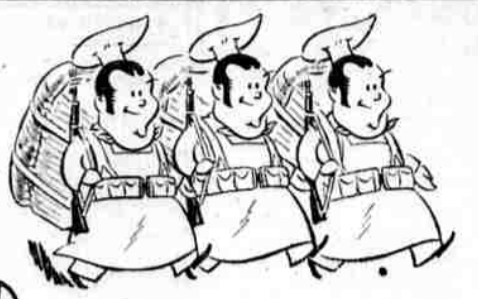

The Waves project was outlined at Roseburg recently by Ensign Elizabeth Hill of the Waves enlistment headquarters for Oregon at 735 S. W. Alder street, Portland.

"The United States navy has asked the Oregon Federation of Women's clubs for help in the vital and urgent program for the enlistment of Waves who replace trained navy men for duty at sea," said Mrs. George Moorhead, Salem, president of the Oregon Federation of Women's clubs, in announcing the state-wide program which will bring 150 clubs and 5000 women into the project. "Obviously none of us can serve on a warship. Individually, however, we can achieve that goal by making it possible for a man to be assigned to that service on a warship. We can do this by helping enlist a Wave who makes a man available for sea duty."

Each club member becomes a Wave recruiter. She has full information on the opportunities of ferred young women, the 22 schools at which she may attend, and other details of the Waves program. The individual quota of each club member is to help in enlisting one Wave. Her Waves may come from any place in Oregon, Southwestern Washington and Idaho—she is not limited to her own community. The Waves requirements are few—an applicant must be between 20 and 36 years of age, be a U. S. citizen, have no children under 18 years, and be in good health.
