HERE are the outstanding republican weaknesses: Lack of leadership. Lack of a clear, definite, CONSTRUCTIVE program that people can get their teeth into.

THE republican convention will provide the republican party with a leader. He may be a GREAT leader, wise, sincere and magnetic.

IF a miracle should happen and the members of its resolutions committee should be men of outstanding statesmanship, unassailable integrity and FIERCE SINCERITY of opinion...

AS of now, millions of people are uneasy about the New Deal. They fear its recklessness with money. They are disturbed by its trends toward centralization of all governmental authority...

THAT, as this writer sees it, is the republican party's great present handicap. Until it finds

BECLUDING THE ISSUE

By Charles V. Stanton

THE trend of the New Deal campaign for the 1944 elections already is beginning to bud in speeches and writings of party propagandists. It is quite apparent that a psychological "fast one" is in the making, whereby there will be an attempt to draw attention of American voters away from the fact they are selecting a chief executive.

Patriotism is one of the strongest emotions governing the country. We have surrounded the office of commander-in-chief with an aura of sentimentality. As a nation of free people we have accepted voluntarily the responsibility of implicit obedience to the commander-in-chief.

We have placed the office of commander-in-chief on a pedestal of respect and obedience. It would not, ordinarily be good taste to refer to that office in words of criticism, but when the title is tossed into the arena as a political football and is cheapened by its possessor for the purpose of retention of personal power and glory, then it no longer can command the respect it rightfully deserves.

The president's office as commander-in-chief is in reality more or less honorary, ranking in importance, though not in euphony, with the designation, "Defender of the Peace," given the King of Great Britain.

The actual conduct of the war is in the hands of men trained for warfare, not, thank goodness, in the hands of politicians. The army and navy, to date, have succeeded fairly well, and obviously could do a lot better if not handicapped by bureaucratic interference and domestic muddling—strictly New Deal products.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill would like to have us believe they are the grand strategists of the allied campaign. Their frequent, highly-publicized meetings would lead, without closer examination, to such conclusions. But at each of their meetings they were accompanied by their general staffs who plotted the military operations, submitting, through courtesy, their decisions for approval by the two great political leaders.

It is foolish to believe a change in the office of president, and thereby of commander-in-chief, would in any manner alter the military program from the standpoint of technical operation.

The propagandists will beat the commander-in-chief tom-toms loud and long in the forthcoming election, hoping by their cadence to lull the voter into a hypnotic sleep in which his patriotic emotion will blot out awareness of the domestic scene.

The paramount issue of the forthcoming election is the choice by the American people of a president, not a commander-in-chief. That New Deal leaders are already beginning to becloud the issue is an acknowledgement of weakness in their position.

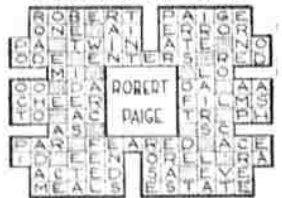

We realize that a great many people are firm followers of the president. The majority are persons enraptured by his outstanding personality. The minority are sincere believers in the administrative policies of the New Deal.

But we hope no American will be deceived by the political honey and chicanery which would misdirect serious consideration of the actual issue through a process of flag-waving.

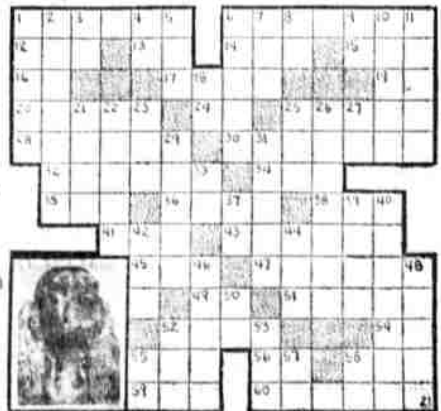

a leader that people will trust and a program that people can understand and have faith in, it will have little chance of success.

OUT OUR WAY

DIAL LOG

Time was when Monday was kind of a blue day because we had so many good shows over the weekend that the first of the week was quite a let-down; but that's not the case any more, because Monday evening is one of the best nights of the whole week, with Army Air Forces, 6:30; Lone Ranger, 7:30; Chuck and the Bunkhouse Boys, 8; Point Sublime, 8:30 and Sherlock Holmes at 10:00. What more could you ask? Remember that Chuck and his gang are happy to answer any of your requests and have promised to square dance for some night soon. We'll try to give you warning enough so you can get your crowd together and swing your partners with a will. It's probably unnecessary to remind you again about Point Sublime—but we must say in passing that Ben White's explanation of the income tax was the clearest we've heard yet. Holmes and Watson foiled another nefarious plot of the dastardly Professor's again tonight this week discovering a man drowned in busy Paddington station in the middle of London all of which will be elucidated at 10 o'clock when Sherlock Holmes takes his weekly airing on 1490.

G. I. Joe Yarns For Music; Give Your Instruments

G. I. Joe is not only going to continue blasting Japs and nazis at an ever-increasing rate, but he is going to do it to music—thanks to a nation-wide campaign to collect musical instruments for the boys across the seas. This campaign, now going into its final week, is being sponsored in Roseburg by Coca-Cola Bottling company of Roseburg at the request of the War Department.

Small instruments such as harmonicas, ocarinas, accordions, guitars, banjos, etc., are particularly needed. Those wishing to donate are asked to take them to any "Coca-Cola" dealer. "Coca-Cola trucks will pick them up and forward them to the army, which will send them overseas at once.

There are few if any comforts around a foxhole. The least we can do is give our boys a little music," according to Ernest Unruh, manager of the local Coca-Cola Bottling Co., who is in charge of the local campaign.

Coquille High Gets Ex-Oakland School Head

E. R. James, former superintendent of schools at Oakland, Oregon, has been employed as principal of the Coquille high school, it has been announced at Coquille. He is to assume his duties at the opening of the fall term in September.

Mrs. Helen Beck, Native Of Oakland, Passes Away

Mrs. Helen Beck, 65, died recently at Portland, where funeral services were held Friday. Mrs. Beck was born in Oakland, Ore., where she was married March 19, 1903, to W. A. Beck, who survives. She had been a resident of Hillsboro for the past 23 years.

Surviving, besides the husband, are a son, John A. Beck, Keasby, two brothers, George R. Medley, Cottage Grove, and E. B. Medley, Springfield, and three sisters, Mrs. Leila Harmon, Portland; Mrs. Opal Jones, Disston; and Mrs. Adella Hatch, Cottage Grove.

Club for Service Personnel Will Be Opened Here

A club for the entertainment of service men and women will be opened in Roseburg Saturday, March 25, under sponsorship of the Roseburg Junior Women's club, it was announced today by Helen Saar and Meta Marie Arnot, co-chairmen, who are requesting donations and contributions to complete the arrangements.

The use of the Episcopal parish hall has been donated as a site for the club, it was stated, and all of the principal furnishings have been secured. Still needed are phonograph records, particularly late dance numbers, games, cards, lamps, pillows and dishes.

Present plans are to open the club from 5 p. m. to 11 p. m. each Saturday and from 3 p. m. to 10 p. m. each Sunday.

Members of the Junior Women's club will serve as hostesses. If additional hostesses are found necessary they will be selected and invited.

Women's clubs and church guilds have agreed to provide chaperonage and refreshments on a rotating basis. The Catholic Altar society will be in charge the opening night, March 25, and the Business and Professional Women's club will serve Sunday, March 26.

Persons having table games, checkers, chess, Chinese checkers, cards, decks of playing cards, etc., which they are willing to donate, are requested to leave them with any member of the Junior Women's club. Reading lamps or desk lamps are also desired. The committee is endeavoring to obtain dishes which can be spared from homes of the city, in order to avoid use of the dishes belonging to the Episcopal guild.

Lodges, civic clubs and patriotic organizations are to be contacted it was reported, and will be asked to make cash contributions to aid in meeting the few expenses that are anticipated.

The need for such a club, the co-chairmen report, is growing as Roseburg is being visited each

Leslie M. Scott

The experience of Leslie M. Scott in the publishing business, in security transactions, and as Chairman of the State Highway Commission from 1932 to 1935 and, during the past three years, as state treasurer, equip him thoroughly, we believe, for continuance as executive head of that office.

If Mr. Scott is nominated and reelected state treasurer, the people of Oregon will be assured of a member who will do his part on the several state boards and commissions of which the state treasurer is a member; one who will apply sound policies; economize in expenditures; promote business, agriculture, education, employment and particularly recruitment of returning service men; and protect the rights of employers, farmers, workmen and service men.

Mr. Scott's inherent interest in the welfare of men and women in the armed services and in the welfare of those honorably discharged therefrom, is naturally enhanced by the fact that his only son is in the United States Army.

His past record in public and private office, and as state treasurer, merit favorable consideration in nominating him for election to the office of state treasurer for a second time. (Paid advertisement.)

EARLY VS. LATE PULLETS It may be a little late to discuss this idea, though it really depends on what we mean by early pullets. In this locality, we believe most folks claim pullets hatched in March or before as early. In less favored localities, early means anything hatched before the first of May.

There are advantages for both early and late hatched pullets. Early birds are laying large eggs in the fall when the prices are the highest, but they have a tendency to moult during the fall or early winter. They also are more likely to go into their regular molt earlier in the second fall than those hatched later.

The late hatched pullets naturally are laying small eggs in the fall when egg prices are high. But they can be depended on to lay straight through the winter, once they have started. They also lay later in the second fall, just about offsetting the first year extra profit of the early pullets.

Very early and very late pullets also usually have much lighter attacks of coxy, though it is difficult to say which is the more fortunate in this respect. Both the cold weather of early brooding and the hot dry weather of late brooding tend to decrease the numbers of coxy bugs the chicks pick up, and thereby the chicks gradually build resistance to the disease.
