WAR SECRETARY STIMSON,
 who seldom tells us anything but can nearly always be believed when he does talk, tells his press conference in Washington that at Cassino "the simple fact is that the Germans STOPPED us."
 He adds:
 "Cassino would be a severe setback ONLY if we did not profit from our lessons. We have learned a great many things since the war began and we have put our learning into practice. There is no reason to believe that our ability to profit from experience has ended now."

BEFORE becoming too critical of Cassino, it will be well for us to remember that at bloody Tarawa we learned the lessons that served us so well in the highly successful taking of the strategic Marshall Islands.
 SO far as we uninformed spectators here at home can see, the battle in Burma is still a broken field with no certainty as to where the ball may be.
 The Japs are still hitting hard above Imphal at our China supply route. Latest available dispatches say there is "heavy and continuous fighting" there, with "little change in the situation."
 At the same time, we're biting hard at their rail supply line to their big base at Myittha, in northern Burma.
 We've made ANOTHER glider base command landing along the railroad some 50 miles to the southwest of Myittha, and General Stilwell's Chinese-American army is driving down on it from the north.
 Far to the south, along the Bay of Bengal coast, the British make another advance along the road to Akyab. The fighting in this whole area is far too confused and mixed-up for us here on the home front to be able to make even a guess as to the final outcome.
 We'll just have to wait and see.

CHURCHILL, by the way, gets his vote of confidence from the house of commons (as it was practically certain he would) and so can go ahead with his assurance that his policies have the support of Britain.
 He isn't unanimous in expressing confidence in the government to 23 expressing LACK of confidence—but is amply sufficient.

 Mr. and Mrs. A. Baldwin, who today took over ownership and management of the Grand hotel from Mrs. Anna May Seem, have purchased the Coshow home, located at East Lane and Watson streets. The fine residence property, formerly the home of the late O. P. Coshow, a justice of the Oregon Supreme court, has been converted as a

THEY WILL NOT FORGET

By Charles V. Stanton

WHAT do the boys overseas think of the folks back home? We have seen a great number of letters from service men and it seems their complaints of the home front are increasing alarmingly.

In place of the unity we need at home and abroad and the spirit of cooperation and support that should exist between the fighting forces and the home folk, we seem to have increasing disunity, suspicion, selfishness and greed. Much of our domestic division is purposely created by political leaders, hoping, through factionalism, to maintain themselves in power. But when lack of harmony on the home front begins to stir suspicion in the minds of fighting men overseas, a dangerous and critical condition is in the making.

As an illustration of the thoughts in the minds of service men, we quote briefly from letters written from combat areas.

PFC M. N. Eastman writes from the South Pacific to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Eastman, of Winston:

"I just read in the paper about another strike in a defense plant. It seems to me that all those people who are striking do not care if this war never comes to an end. Every time they strike they are helping out the Japs. For all those who are doing something to help win and get this war over, there always are some who are trying to make more money, and they are helping the Japs every time by thinking exclusively of themselves. Every time they strike they are holding up equipment, and we sure can't fight with our bare hands. But maybe they think we can."

From another theater writes Sergeant Peter W. Todd, who, in a letter to his brother, Francis Todd, Oakland, Ore., tells of combat with the Japanese, in which the enemy, facing death from the advancing Americans, "sounded like a bunch of goats bawling."

"Our boys took everything like real soldiers. When a man got hurt he kept a smile on his face. If only the people back home could have witnessed a lot of those things, they wouldn't be squawking for higher wages. It really is a beautiful picture—the people at home striking for higher wages. They are already getting more than we are, but we can't strike. We must pay a very high price with good American blood. Yes, it really makes us feel mighty proud of our dear old home country when the people let us down and go on strike for a four-cent raise."

In a different vein, but still critical of the attitude of the home front, Lieutenant Leland Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Russell of Roseburg, writing from England, says:

"Today I read something that sort of made me mad. People at home, some people, are criticizing the army for using flame throwers against the Japs. That is going too far. Against certain kinds of emplacements a flame thrower is indispensable. Without them those boys might have been thrown back into the Pacific with terrific losses."

"There is nothing pretty about war. There never will be. Most of us have come to the point where we are willing to use most anything to win. After all, which is worse, a bullet or the flame? Both are deadly, both hideous. Both are means to an end. In our hands and properly used, both will aid in getting this thing over sooner. One time one falls, so we must use the other."

"If you could take a poll today, I imagine that you would be surprised by the number of soldiers who would tell you to use anything just to get this over and get home."

"Those home front sob sisters had better mend their ways. This bunch of soldiers will not forget."

"Soldiers will not forget!"
 There lies the great danger. When they have seen war prolonged for political purposes; when they have seen comrades fall in frenzied battle because equipment was not available, yet hearing of strikes in production plants; when they hear and read of the vapourings of the super idealists, the brotherly-love individuals, listening all the while to the groans of comrades who have been torn by shrapnel or mutilated by barbarous booby traps, it is plain to see why the fighting forces are losing confidence in the home front. They are not able to comprehend the behind-the-scenes forces which are at work smearing, dividing, sowing seeds of disunity and factionalism. Such things should not exist in these perilous times. The soldier cannot realize that his sacrifice is being betrayed by political leaders and selfish pressure groups and that a complacent public is not uniting to combat such insidious influences.
 They will not forget!

duplex residence, and one-half will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin.

The new owners of the Grand hotel have had many years of experience in the hotel business in Portland and Astoria and came to Roseburg from the latter city, where they recently sold the State hotel, which they operated for a number of years.

Far to the south, along the Bay of Bengal coast, the British make another advance along the road to Akyab. The fighting in this whole area is far too confused and mixed-up for us here on the home front to be able to make even a guess as to the final out- come.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I was just tellin' my brother Fred this mornin', Judge...there's never been a time in our lives when we got to live up to that old sayin' 'United we stand, divided we fall' more than we have to today."
 "How true that is, Herb. And for the life of me, I can't figure out why, at a time like this, some folks insist on raising a question like prohibition. I can't imagine anything that would tickle our enemies more than to get us folks over here taking sides against each other, arguing about an issue like that. We've got a lie-man's job on our hands to win this war and we can't be wasting our minds, our money and our strength fighting about something we tried for nearly 14 years and found couldn't win."
 "I say there's a time and a place for everything, and this is no time or place to be doing any fightin' except the kind that's going to win the war."
