Odessa "amid scenes of terrible pillage."

That would be interesting if true. Time will tell whether it is true.

The Russians are drawing a ring of steel around Odessa and its fall is a practical certainty. A glance at your map, however, will tell you it isn't likely to fall right away—unless it should happen to be true that its German and Rumanian defenders are fighting and destroying each other.

Odessa's water defenses are among the strongest in the world.

ANOTHER interesting slant: The Finnish parliament is reported to have received MODIFIED Russian peace terms and to be debating them in secret. The Russians, you see, haven't given up their attempt to lure away Germany's Finnish stooge.

A great formation of American heavy bombers (MORE than 500 Fortresses and Liberators, the dispatches say) attack Budapest. Railroads and aircraft factories are said to have been our principal targets.

German planes FIGHT BACK HARD, shooting down 33 of our bombers. Our bombers shot down more than 100 of the attacking German fighters.

THE strength of their defense indicates the importance of Budapest in the Germans' military plans.

Your map will show you at a glance that it is a center of the railroads by which the fighting in Rumania must be supplied. It lies astride the Danube, which is a great artery of transportation. It is also presumed that German factories have been moved in large numbers to Budapest.

It isn't hard to guess why we're bombing the city.

ANOTHER interesting hint in the news.

French light warships destroy a German convoy and its escorting warships IN THE ADRIATIC. British and American commando forces attack the Yugoslav island of Solta in the Adriatic.

Keep in mind that this Yugoslav Adriatic coast is the back door to the Balkans. We're rather obviously keeping that invasion route open in case we might want to use it.

THE news from northeast India is as disturbing as ever and in the same way.

The Japs have now cut ALL the roads leading into Imphal. Asked in New Delhi whether it will be possible to drop supplies from the air to the beleaguered garrison, Lord Mountbatten answers that relief from the air won't be required "as the crisis will be overcome before such action will be necessary."

We want to believe he knows what he is talking about, and rather think he does. Still, that is exactly the kind of talk that preceded the fall of Singapore.

THE battle of Burma appears so far to be a communications cutting affair. The Japs have cut Imphal's communications, and in their rear we have cut the supply lines leading into their important railhead base of Myitkyina.

Anything COULD happen there—including a serious Jap defeat.

THERE'S still no word from our fleet that sailed right through the Jap island defenses to attack Palau. That indicates that our ships are still too deep in enemy waters to risk breaking radio silence.

A GOOD WORK TEAM

By Charles V. Stanton

A FRIEND from a neighboring county was in Roseburg a few days ago and was speaking of the filings of candidacy by U. S. Senator Guy Cordon and Congressman Harris Ellsworth.

'Do you think Douglas county can expect to have two men in congress?" he asked.

We would like to know WHY, if two good men are available for congress, they should not be from Douglas county? Marion county has had a senator and a representative in congress for 27 years. Senator McNary, Congressman Hawley and Congressman Mott were Marion county residents. Senator George Chamberlain, a resident of Multnomah county, went to congress from Salem, after serving as governor. If Marion county can furnish two members in congress, is there any reason why Douglas county cannot do the same?

What difference does residence make in a man's ability to serve in congress?

Douglas county has furnished some outstanding political figures in past years—General Joseph Lane, Frank W. Benson, Stephen F. Chadwick, Binger Hermann, George M. Brown, A. M. Crawford—men who were true statesmen and performed valuable service.

Congressman Harris Ellsworth, elected from Douglas county to serve the Fourth Congressional district, has amazed the state of Oregon with the ability shown in his first term. He has won nation-wide attention for his work in utilization of wood waste. He has performed a most valuable service on behalf of the light metals industry of the Pacific Northwest by championing the development of alumina clays. He has maintained a broad view in his activities. His efforts have not been confined to the boundaries of his own district. Ellsworth has not been a swivel-chair congressman. He has not been glorying in the "Hon." before his name nor the "M. C." which follows it. Instead he has removed his coat, rolled up his sleeves and has gone to work in real earnest.

It has been shown, conclusively, that Douglas county can furnish a congressman who can give outstanding service. We are now offering as a candidate for United States Senator a man who can perform equally well, and the simple fact that he, too, is from Douglas county should not detract in any way from consideration of his ability to serve.

If the people of the State of Oregon want a work team in congress, they have the opportunity to secure such a team in Cordon and Ellsworth. They have pulled together before. They have in working on local projects in past years, demonstrated their power to draw heavy loads. We believe the people of Oregon want work from the men they send to congress and we well know Cordon and Ellsworth would make a team that could accomplish much.

We have had plenty of worrywarts who have been predicting that Douglas county could never take its place in industrial and business life. Now they are applying their inferiority complexes to the political field. Douglas county is in the midst of an industrial boom far greater than anyone had ever anticipated. In the political field we have two men who have every capability for the offices for which they are candidates. Naturally we are desirous of seeing them returned to office. We know their worth. In fact, we haven't exhausted our resources of good men. If the state needs more men for efficient service in public office Douglas county has the material.

Rebellion Breaks In El Salvador

CARACAS, Venezuela, April 4 (AP)—The newspaper Ultimas Noticias quoted Radio Salvador today as saying that a revolt against the government of President Martinez had broken out in the republic of El Salvador Sunday and that the rebels had occupied the government palace and a number of other buildings.

The broadcast said that followers of Martinez were offering resistance from police headquarters, but there was no indication of the outcome.

Ultimas Noticias said the nature of the revolt was not clear but that any movement against the established regime which had been in office since 1931 could be considered contrary to the interests of the united nations.

In Washington last night, ambassador Hector David Castro of El Salvador declared he had received a cable from his government saying "A small subversive movement was started here yesterday, but the situation is now entirely under control of the government."

El Salvador declared war on Japan the day after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and four days later declared she was at war with Germany.

Martinez, who assumed control of the government by a military coup in 1931, was elected for a six-year term by the constitutional assembly last Feb. 20.

Allies Agree On Policy for Czechs

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—The Czechoslovak government in London has agreed with Russia, Britain and the United States on a plan for administering its territory as soon as military operations permit.

The Czech embassy was so advised today in a communique from London which said that a delegation of the government will go into Czechoslovakian liberated areas the moment the red army command declares them behind the line.

The red army is virtually at the Czech northeast border already, but first allied troops to reenter the country are to be an independent Czech brigade, the message said. Czech liaison officers also are to accompany Russian troops moving into their territory.

Czech guerrillas have established contact with advancing Russian forces, the London report said. It added that many Slovaks are escaping from the neighboring nazi puppet state of Slovakia to join guerrillas in the Carpathian mountains.

The plans for Czechoslovakia, which do not provide for any form of allied military government, are at the other end of the scale of civil administration schemes from the program used in Italy.

They may serve as a model for other areas whose exiled governments have maintained a firm position.

Washington News From an Inside View

Argument, Sentiment, Comment

By HARRIS ELLSWORTH
Congressman, Fourth Oregon District

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 1—There is a period of quiet here now. The congress is in recess until April 12th. Since the 12th is mid-week, it is doubtful that anything of importance will be taken up until the beginning of the week following—the 17th. To fill in the opening inactive period several minor non-controversial bills will be brought up and acted upon immediately after the recess. Twe forestry bills, long ago reported out unanimously by the committee and recently reported to the floor by the rules committee, will undoubtedly be passed at that time. One of the bills is an authorization for additional federal appropriation for forest fire control, being an amendment to the old Clarke-McNary Act. The other bill authorizes appropriation for continuation of the forest survey. Neither bill involves anything new but both bills are important especially to western forest areas.

Of greatest concern at the moment seems to be the consideration of the veterans' aid bill—variously called the "GI Bill of Rights" and the "Veteran Omnibus Bill". The World War Veterans committee has been holding hearings on this legislation which, in addition to specifying certain administrative changes in the handling of veteran affairs, would authorize over three billions for education and unemployment benefits. The senate passed the bill with an overwhelming majority. It is favored generally by veterans and by the larger veterans organizations. It will undoubtedly pass the house. The house committee will, however, comb it out carefully and the bill will be subject to amendment on the floor. The feeling on this side of the Capitol is that the senate said in effect, "this is a good idea" and left the house to refine and perfect the legislation.

The Veterans committee this week approved a bill to provide seeing-eye dogs for blind veterans.

Committee activity scheduled during the recess included: Senate military affairs subcommittee, headed by Senator Murray, will meet on Tuesday and continue for the remainder of the week on S. 1730, to create an office of demozilization, to provide for contract termination and the disposal of surplus property; and S. 1823, Office of War Mobilization and Adjustment. House military affairs subcommittee, headed by Representative Costello, expects to continue its hearings on draft deferment and manpower. House ways and means committee is subject to meet further on tax simplification, but that is not definite.

A number of state primary elections are coming up and there has been quite a buzz of political talk this week. General view is that the Wisconsin election will be an important indication of a trend. So far as republican presidential possibilities are concerned, I think the best summary of that is to say that, while most of those now prominently mentioned have outspoken opposition here, I do not hear any particular expressions of opinion for any candidate. Perhaps after some of the preference primaries have been held, the situation may tend to jell. In spite of the slackening of the anti-new deal tide in the recent Oklahoma special election, there is no change in the opinion that the republicans will gain enough seats to control the house next session.

First Aid Course Slated Here By Red Cross Worker

American Red Cross Staff Assistant Robert Culbertson of San Francisco will be in Roseburg April 10-15 to conduct advanced and instructor's courses in first aid, according to a telegram just received by Mrs. Claude Baker, first aid chairman for Douglas county. Harold P. Terwilliger, director of the San Francisco office, states that Mr. Culbertson will give a fifteen-hour course for those desiring both advanced and instructor's cards and will discuss all the latest first aid methods.

The room in Junior high school which has been used previously for first aid classes has been made available again, according to Mrs. Baker. Classes will begin at 7:30 p. m. and will continue all week. Those desiring further information may call Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Tom Parkinson or Mrs. Roy Young. Mrs. Young and Mrs. Parkinson have been appointed by Mrs. Baker to register those who will take the courses. It is advisable to do this before Mr. Culbertson arrives to save time, Mrs. Baker states.

"It has been several years since Roseburg has been privileged to have an instructor from district headquarters and since these are the only dates available it is urgent that the work be taken at this time," says Mrs. Baker.

"Men from logging camps or other industries are especially urged to attend. It is understood that a number from Sutherlin have already indicated their desire to attend, and several of the mills in Roseburg are sending men. Nearly all of those holding current instructors cards have indicated that they will register."

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN

When the curtain goes up tonight at 6:30 in the Little Theatre off Times square, Mr. First Nighter will hear (and so will you) a special play written for the Easter season by Anthony Wayne, author of the play they present each Christmas. This new presentation, "The Third Day", is based on events connected with the trial and resurrection of Christ. Lt. Commander Hansel H. Tower, navy chaplain and author of the book, "Fighting the Devil With the Marines", will appear as a guest speaker on the show—so get set for a fine half hour. There's a rumor around here that Guy Cordon will speak at 7:15 tonight on a state-wide hook-up. At the time this is being written it hasn't been confirmed, but be on the look-out for it. If this is right, you'll hear your state and local news at 7 o'clock tonight—but understand that this isn't definite yet—we'd just suggest that you leave your radio turned on good and loud after First Nighter and then you won't miss whatever comes along.

Don't forget Resital Hall of the Air tonight at 8—we gave you the lists of artists last night. Then at 8:30 there's Bulldog Drummond, following strange footsteps to a nefarious booby trap which is set for murder. The story is the "Case of the Limping Footsteps". It includes all the usual ingredients of the spine-chillers, but has an airplane crash with a dead man at the controls as sort of an extra icing on the cake.

U. S. Diplomatic Link With Italy Changed by F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, April 4—(AP)—President Roosevelt today broadened American diplomatic representation in Italy but the White House explained quickly that the action involved "no departure whatever from the existing system of allied control in Italy."

Alexander C. Kirk, American minister to Egypt, was named as the American member on the advisory council for Italy, and was given the personal rank of ambassador.

He will succeed Robert D. Murphy as the U. S. representative on the council, and the White House said Murphy, also retaining the personal rank of ambassador, would devote all his time to his position as political advisor on the staff of the allied commander-in-chief for the Mediterranean theatre.

The action was observed with interest by diplomats here in view of the recent soviet government decision to extend directly to Marshal Badoglio's Italy government a kind of diplomatic recognition which Great Britain and the United States have refrained from giving. There had been speculation that the U. S. and Britain might follow Russia's lead, but officials in Washington have consistently denied any such thing was planned.

Russia's Aims Not Clear

The Italian political situation took on fresh complications early last month when the Badoglio government at Naples announced that diplomatic representatives would be exchanged with Moscow.

The objective sought by the Russians has not been fully explained. One theory was that the Russians wanted airbases on the Italian coast to permit shuttle flying of supplies into Yugoslavia and had been unable to obtain action from the allied command, so that they sought it directly from Badoglio. Another was that the Russians sought closer political connection with the Badoglio government in order to temper internal political disturbances in Italy which might hinder the war effort.

Last week Izvestia, Russian government newspaper, said Britain and the United States should not take alarm at the dispatch of a Russian representative to Naples and declared that the soviet government was willing to have changes in the Badoglio government, including the abdication of King Vittorio Emanuele, without delay.
