

Cottage Grove Is Track Meet Victor Over RHS, 66-56

Cottage Grove defeated Roseburg 66 to 56 in the annual dual meet for high school teams at Finlay field Friday. The Roseburg athletes had an opportunity to tie the score, could they have taken the relay, but the Cottage Grove team won out by a narrow margin.

The Roseburg high-school team had had little practice, due to inclement weather, and went into the match without even having had time trials, and were thus badly handicapped. Coach Hod Turner, however, was well pleased with the showing and expects to have the team in better condition for the district meet at Eugene, May 5. First and second place winner at Eugene will go to Corvallis May 11 and 12 for the state meet.

Bert Young won the state championship in the broad jump for Roseburg in last year's state meet, but has been lost to the team by graduation.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 22—(AP)—Throwing rights and lefts that twice had his opponent groggy, Joe Kahut, the fighting farmer of Woodburn, Ore., handed Bob Blevins of Marysville, Calif., his second defeat in 15 starts in a 10-round main event here last night.

Job Preference Goes to War Vets, Henry Ford Says

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP)—Henry Ford has pledged that war veterans will get job preference in Ford Motor company plants after the war and voiced the hope that "other employers will do the same thing."

In a message today to Brigadier General Frank T. Hines, director of retaining and reemployment, Ford said all that servicemen need do, when Ford production lines start turning out automobile lines again, is "to come in and go to work."

Ford said servicemen deserve the "first call" on postwar jobs because others have "made a lot of money out of this war and the servicemen have made nothing."

Board Refuses to Shift Cheese Workers to 1A

LOYAL, Wis., April 22.—(AP)—Fred Lakosky, chairman of the Clark county selective service board, said today that the board had refused to reclassify into 1A 24 young men, all under 26, who the board held, are key men in cheese factories.

That action was taken, Lakosky said, because the board felt that if these men were inducted, 20 Clark county cheese factories would be forced to close.

"If our action is not upheld by the state and national selective service directors," Lakosky added, "the entire Clark county board will resign as a body."

Major General Hershey, national selective service director, issued orders recently to all draft boards to classify into 1A all men between 18 and 26 who are not key men in specified essential occupations. Cheese making was not listed as one of the essential occupations.

JOBS AND INCOME SECURITY

What happens to this country after the fighting is over is of vital personal concern to every American. How vital depends upon the extent to which we value our present way of life, our free institutions, and our existing form of government. These are all the prizes at stake, and if they mean anything to us we must prepare now for after this war and be unwilling to see the idea of postwar planning made a political football, a grindstone for the axes of special interest groups, or a bone of contention between those who want to go back to the past and those who want to blueprint the "perfect world."

If, when the fighting is over, we have ex-soldiers selling apples on the street, or masses of workers idle, or people starving in one part of the country while food surpluses rot in others, we shall have lost this war. It will be too late to "plan."

Postwar planning must be faced realistically. We must prepare now against unemployment during the reconversion period, and for full and continuing employment under a peacetime economy. The first goal of postwar planning should be a foundation for better living through provision for enough jobs and lasting jobs.

The basis of America's postwar economy should be private enterprise, with private business and industry and agriculture continuing to operate as the peoples' primary means for providing jobs and producing goods and services; with government performing its constitutional function of establishing the rules of the game, acting as impartial referee, and effecting fiscal policies through taxation and expenditure programs such as private works that will mesh with private undertakings.

But the private enterprise system must adjust itself to a changing world. Before there can be blueprints there must be unity of purpose among all groups, with a realization that our group interests are identical. There must be fullest co-operation and team work, based on mutual trust on the part of business, labor, agriculture and government. This trust can't merely be assumed, it must be honestly earned through practice in the first place and thereafter preserved by continuous good faith, performance and collaboration. If our private enterprise system is to go forward there must be a new sense of responsibility for the welfare of all the people. Business must recognize its obligation to provide jobs and income security. Labor must promise a full day's work and make it possible for those seeking employment to have it. Both must recognize their dependence on agriculture as producer and consumer. Agriculture in turn must recognize that it is dependent upon business and labor and that there cannot be profitable markets for its products unless the rest of the nation prospers and has the means to buy.

None of America's economic groups is self-sufficient. Each is dependent upon the other; the terms business and labor and agriculture lose their capital letters and become "We, the People" when we realize that all are consumers—each others consumers, and there cannot be full and continuing employment unless more people have the means to buy more of the produce of our collective brains and hands and invested savings.

It is necessary that there must be adequate incentive to encourage risk and responsibility. Otherwise dollars saved will not be dollars dared for backing new possibilities for new jobs, opened by new ideas, nor will the new ideas themselves be forthcoming.

We must recognize the need for a more balanced economy and the importance of utilizing our natural resources and other assets to the end that full time productive work will be available to all our citizens seeking employment.

We must preserve the sovereignty of the State of Oregon at all costs; restore to our communities and local governments confidence, initiative and self-reliance, and cease looking to the federal government for those things that we can and must do for ourselves.

If this crisis is to be successfully met industry, agriculture and labor must take the offensive. The freedom to produce is the only hope of a postwar world. We can surrender to the socially minded groups who have nothing to offer except ultimate bankruptcy, or we can win the greatest battle of history by assuring for all Americans the opportunity to work and, in so doing, extending that opportunity into the far corners of the earth. We must prepare the way for a decent standard of living and self-respect for our people or surrender to the compulsions and directions of the dictator state.

Those of us who are employers have a definite all-important responsibility. We have the obligation of providing jobs—productive work, a decent standard of living. Let's dedicate ourselves to that purpose. Let's recreate in ourselves the faith we once had—faith in ourselves, in our community and in our country. Let's risk all that we may gain all.
