MUSIC WEEK, MAY 7-14

By Charles V. Stanton

CURTAINED by wartime conditions, National Music week, May 7 to 14, is now being celebrated throughout the country. This is the 21st annual observance. The keynote is "Use music to foster unity for the war and the peace to follow."

There is a wide divergence throughout the world in political, economic and social ideas; so divergent, in fact, that a great war is now in progress because of those ideologies. But there is one common meeting place for the peoples of all nations and races and that is in music. Regardless of color or creed, the work of the great masters of musical composition are enjoyed and revered by all. Music provides a means of comradeship which nothing else can equal.

The importance of music in the field of international relations is aptly expressed by C. M. Tremaine, secretary of the National and Inter-American Music week committee, who says:

"There is no alchemy which can transform human nature overnight, nor formula for solving all the problems of divergent national needs and aspirations and of conflicting groups at home. Nationalism cannot be merged into a working internationalism, except through the process of time. The world and the postwar conditions will need both nationalism and internationalism for many years to come, and the successful blending of the two will depend upon the degree to which we can develop the spirit of friendliness among the peoples of different nations, just as friendliness among domestic groups will be needed to promote harmony and progress at home."

"That our statesmen recognize the wholesome and harmonizing influence of music is shown by the fact that the president of the United States, the governors of all the states and hundreds of mayors have given their moral support to Music Week and have urged the active participation of the citizens of their respective states. Music Week is more than a celebration by and for music lovers. It is an expression of friendship by and for all groups."

More of the Same Bunk

Isn't it a grand and glorious feeling when you can ease the aching corns and bunions out of pinching shoes and into loose, comfortable carpet slippers? That same psychology is now being worked on the American public by an administration which is relieving the pinch of rationing, so we can give a big sigh of comfort before the presidential election. In this column several months ago we predicted an easing of ration regulations before election time, and it is only human to enjoy saying: "I told you so." Of course, the New Deal is horrified by insinuations that lifting of ration rules has anything to do with politics, but, as usual, with their bungling tactics, they have their wires crossed again and while one group tells us food conditions make it possible to practically eliminate all restrictions on meat, another is howling to high heaven that this is to be the toughest year yet to obtain food.

We would like to venture another prediction and that is that before the fall election rolls around there will be gasoline for all automobiles.

A good many doctors have enhanced their reputations by convincing their patients that only the prescribed ill-tasting nostrums pulled them back from the edge of the grave, when, in fact, about all the patient needed was a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda.

And the strange part of it is that so many people fall for that type of malarkey.

OUT OUR WAY

Washington News From an Inside View
Argument, Sentiment, Comment

By HARRIS ELLSWORTH
Congressman, Fourth Oregon District

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Other than battle front news, the most exciting news of this week was the announcement of the relaxing of meat rationing. Meat points were removed for the very simple reason that we have too much meat on the range that can no longer be withheld from the market. Department of Agriculture figures indicate a range inventory of some 10,000,000 more animal units than ever before. We are short of grain to feed this surplus. The herds simply must move to market.

Cynical observers here, including several members of our food study committee who have made a special study of the meat situation, are chuckling over the situation. They have been saying, for some time, that beef had to be released or great losses would result. Assumption was that the "great event," meaning the easing of meat rationing, would come in late summer when it would do the full political campaign the most good. Now they are chuckling because apparently the decision could not be held off any longer. The cynics.

Along this same line, figures on the supply of sugar rather clearly indicate that sugar rationing is no longer necessary. There is, however, reported to be a rather serious unpublished reason for continuing sugar rationing. This reason is that if unlimited sugar purchasing is permitted, the present liquor shortage will lure many people into illicit liquor manufacturing, and sugar is an important raw material for that business. Hardest hit under present rationing are commercial sugar users—bakers and candy makers. Larger quotas should be granted them.

Yesterday I listened to the debate on the resolution (house) providing for an investigation of the seizure of Montgomery Ward and Company in Chicago by the army. The resolution is not a violent one. It merely provides for a committee of seven members of the house who will make an investigation of the incident and report back to congress. Administration followers argued long and loud against the passage of the resolution. It seemed to me their position was unsound. Certainly the people of the country are aroused now over what seemed to be an outlandish usurpation of power—a trend toward dictatorship. Better to have an official investigation now than to leave the people dependent solely upon what might be considered prejudiced statements. The administration will be well protected in the investigation, for the committee, to be appointed by Speaker Rayburn, will consist of four democrats and three republicans.

To the amazement of most members, Congressman Sabbath (democrat of Chicago) voted FOR the resolution. Sabbath has been a member of congress for more than thirty years. He is the oldest member in the house from the standpoint of continuous service in that body. He is an ardent Roosevelt follower and did his best, as chairman of the rules committee, to keep the resolution from being brought to the floor. Then he voted for it. It is indeed a strange world—sometimes!

The principal legislative business of the house this week was final consideration and passage of the tax return simplification bill. It was approved unanimously on a roll call vote. It is assumed the senate will also pass it promptly and that it shortly will become law. This legislation has the following objectives (as stated in the committee report on the bill):

1. To relieve the great majority of taxpayers from the necessity of computing their income tax.
2. To reduce the number of mathematical computations.
3. To simplify the return form.
4. To decrease the number of persons required to file declarations of estimated tax.
5. To eliminate some of the difficulties and uncertainties in the making of estimates required for declarations.

There are some changes in the individual tax levy. Under this new bill, single persons and married people without dependents will be hit somewhat harder.

Thus far, the ways and means committee has been concentrating its attention upon the problem of simplifying and making easier the millions of returns from individual taxpayers. But as Representative Frank Carlson pointed out, businesses are terribly burdened with numerous and complicated forms devised by the Treasury department. Mr. Carlson read to the house a list of the months of the year showing that business men must fill out from one to eight tax report forms of various kinds each month in the year. The committee will next undertake to bring out a bill that will ease this burden of report making.

Next week the house will consider the flood control bill (H. R. 4485), then the so-called debt limitation bill. The remainder of the week will be devoted to the veterans C. I. bill. The senate next week will take up the extension of lend-lease (previously passed by the house). Following that, up will come the highly controversial anti-poll tax bill. It may be that some of the appropriations bills will be readied before the poll tax bill is taken up. If so, the poll tax fight will be delayed somewhat longer. Most of the committees of both house and senate are very active getting legislation ready for consideration on the floor. The next few weeks will be busy ones.

Ruth Bovingdon Will Enter Nurse's Training

Miss Ruth Bovingdon, valedictorian of the 1944 Roseburg senior high school graduating class, has just been notified of acceptance as a student of Nursing Education at the University of Oregon Medical School in Portland. She will report there July 1 and will receive her training at the medical school and at Multnomah County hospital.

Miss Bovingdon, who is a daughter of J. D. Bovingdon, Oakland banker, has made her home with Dr. and Mrs. George E. Houck in Roseburg for the last three years.

Pensive Winner of Richest Derby in Kentucky History

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 8.—(AP)—The stir up of the 70th and richest of all Kentucky derbies is over.

Pensive, the winner, is now being pointed for the Preakness next Saturday at Pimlico and later the Belmont stakes in a supreme effort to annex racing's triple crown. The chestnut colt, owned by Warren Wright of Chicago, safely tucked away the first leg of the crown by decisively defeating a field of 16 at Churchill Downs Saturday.

Pensive and 22-year-old Conn McCreary, the jockey, made a magnificent team. Pensive ran the mile and a quarter in 2:04 1/5 on a track that was good, but not fast. George Woolf riding Broadcloth, finished second and Eddie Arcaro on Stir Up, third.

Pensive paid $16.20 for a $2 winning ticket and earned a check of $64,675, a new record for derby winnings.

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN

We've discovered that it wasn't spring fever the other day—it was a cold in the head. Oh, Brother! And since a cold in the head, especially in the spring, doesn't make one feel any too philosophical, we didn't care too much about today's soap operas. Of course we realize that it takes a few times to get the stage set and build the characters. Then if we'd been feeling good, we'd probably have liked them both anyway. So we won't commit ourselves today—we'll wait for a while and see how they turn out. Anyway, tonight has some tried and true entertainment—Music You Remember at 6:30 (have we said thanks for our song?), with Annaloris, is always a favorite of ours, and then there's San Quentin On the Air at 7:30. A collection of both old and new music is scheduled for their show tonight—opening with "Semper Paratis" and including "By the River of the Roses," "La Paloma," "Blue Skies" and "There'll Be a Jubilee." Eye Witness News at 8 and Freedom of Opportunity at 8:30 are good entertainment too. For tomorrow night there's First Nighter at 6:30 with a play entitled "Tall Like a Queen"—the story of an actress that sounds rather on the dramatic side. Bulldog Drummond and a missing herd of cattle both get themselves cornered in a tale of the black market at 8:30. Drummond gets out safely, of course, but we'll have to listen in to see whether the beef escapes too. Next week there will be another change on the schedule—we'll tell you about it tomorrow.
