Feeling of Guilt Of Combat Fliers Is Mental Quirk

(By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE)
Associated Press Science Editor

PHILADELPHIA, May 17—The queer feelings of guilt which afflict some of the best combat fliers were described to the American Psychiatric Association yesterday by Lt. Col. Roy R. Grinker and Major John F. Spiegel of the army air forces.

"The first is the feeling about a lost buddy—"I should have got it instead of him."

"The second," said the report, "begins as the flyer approaches the end of his tour of duty. He becomes intensely anxious feeling he will never reach his goal. This is the manifestation of guilt over anticipated desertion of his squadron."

"Often when the orders arrive the immediate reaction is depression. Many indulge in alcohol at this point. Others develop gastrointestinal pains and vomiting. One pilot vomited for 10 days on his journey home because 'the food was too rich, I was used to G rations'."

"Some cannot bear to eat thinking how the boys back in

Gunner's Silver Wings Given Corporal Rutter

News Review Register

Corporal James M. Rutter, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Rutter, 805 Micell St., Roseburg, was graduated last week from the army air forces flexible gunnery school at Laredo army air field, Laredo, Texas. He has been trained to serve as a member of a bomber combat crew and received aerial gunner's silver wings and a promotion in grade at the graduation exercises.

the squadron are living. . . .

"The third source of guilt develops on returning home to a community which welcomes our hero. The flyer receives newspaper publicity, ovations, makes speeches. But his conscience is not fooled. No quarter is given by this inexorable part of his personality which cannot forget the terrific fears, the longing to escape danger, the ever first thought of self-preservation, no matter how well these were repressed or that in performance the man actually had been courageous and even daring."

These men are given a sedative so that they will listen to the doctor's explanation that they aren't really guilty. More than half of them return to combat.

Beavers Shut Out Padres to Retain Top League Spot

(By the Associated Press)
The Portland Beavers yesterday regained the form which pushed them to the top of the Coast league standings and kept their margin over the second place San Francisco Seals intact by shutting out San Diego 5-0.

Helsler limited the Padres to four hits as his mates rattled off 13, battling around in the fourth inning when they turned five hits into four runs. Helsler himself set off that burst with a single.

Successive home runs by Russell and English in the nightcap featured a double win by Los Angeles over Oakland, 9-1, 3-1.

San Francisco gained on Seattle in the battle for second place defeating Hollywood, 9-7, while rain held the Rainiers idle at Sacramento.
