OUR ACCOLADE IS BRIEF

By Charles V. Stanton

THE spirit with which we celebrate Memorial day this year is exemplified, we believe, in an outstanding incident of our War for Independence—the incident which gave us the tradition of Molly Pitcher.

It was at the battle of Monmouth, June 28, 1778, that this heroic woman, braving the dangers of the battlefield, was carrying water to the Continental troops, who, just out of Valley Forge and near the point of exhaustion, were attempting to cut off the evacuation of General Clinton's troops from Philadelphia.

As Molly Pitcher, scorning enemy fire, approached the line of cannoners, she saw her husband fall mortally wounded. Without hesitation she fired the cannon he had already loaded and then took his place to load and fire the fieldpiece until darkness ended the battle. Tears must have blinded her eyes as she fought beside the body of her fallen husband, but history tells us her bravery won for her the commendation of General Washington and appointment as a sergeant in the Continental army.

On this special day we honor those who have died in line of duty, but, while we pay our tribute to our honored dead, the battle goes on. The anvils ring a proud pean of production achievement as we work together with those who fight. By our labors we avenge those who have paid the supreme sacrifice.

Though, like Molly Pitcher, we grieve for our dead, we fight on until the battle shall be won.

There is another lesson to be learned from that battle at Monmouth.

Washington's men had been through the most terrible suffering. The winter at Valley Forge tested the courage and determination of the American people as never before and never since.

At Monmouth, this army, which even yet had not recovered from its great suffering, fought off the British assaults and forced General Clinton to withdraw across the river and eventually to suffer defeat.

We have been through much travail. The war found us unprepared. Pearl Harbor, Bataan, the invasion of the Aleutians, the free roaming of enemy submarines, which even tossed shells upon our shore and loosed planes to drop bombs upon our western forest, are black marks upon our escutcheon.

Our allies had had their Dunkirk, later repeated at Crete. Men died at Kharkov, Sevastopol and Stalingrad in what then seemed a hopeless cause.

We too have suffered, not as did that pitiful handful of patriots in Valley Forge, but enough to know the sting of temporary defeat.

We have seen too many blue stars replaced with those of gold. Yet many more golden stars are to make their appearance before our task is done.

But, though we still expect much of suffering and sorrow, we have assurance that victory must follow. So, with the bodies of the fallen before our eyes, we fight on to win the goal for which they sacrificed their lives.

Today we pay our tribute to the brave men and women who have purchased our freedom at the price of their lives. We honor those who in the strength of youth carry on the struggle to maintain those ideals for which comrades from the days of the Revolution to the present also have fought. Our accolade must be brief for work and fighting remain to be done. But as we carry on let us do so with determination that those who died "shall not have died in vain," but by their efforts and sacrifice shall have contributed to the world new ideals and purposes which, in days to come, will hasten that time when wars will be fought no more.

FOR A change, here's a HOPE-FITL note from the home front:

Edgar F. Kaiser, speaking in Portland, says: "Labor and management should begin immediately to pattern post-war contracts that will be better for both of them (including profit-sharing by employees)." He adds: "We've found in our operations that you can pay high wages and STILL DO A JOB CHEAPER."

DO A JOB CHEAPER.

How low COSTS can be kept, how low WAGES can be pushed, is the yardstick that business management, to use a modern term, is interested in.

KAISER doesn't see hope in cumbersome LAWS as a way to bring this about. He thinks labor and management must get together and work it out between them.

CEREMONY HELD AT SUTHERLIN BY SCOUTS

SUTHERLIN—At an investiture ceremony held on the grounds that are to be scout property, Friday, May 19, eight new scouts were added to the troop. The Brownie "fly-up" saw three of that troop old enough to join the older scouts. Margaret Parrott, Barbara Rose and Rosemary Spackman were invested after their "fly-up" and are now tenderfoot scouts. Other new investitures were Ella Crandall, Joan Clark, Dorothy and Doris Wilkinson and Valma Wridge. Transferred from another troop are Jessie Himelwright, Patty Rose and Roberta Daugherty. This brings the registered membership to thirty-two. Because of the increase another plan of management has been adopted to see that all members are getting the most from their Girl Scout experience. The troop has been divided into three patrols, each with an adult counselor to work with them. The patrols have been named the Blue Birds, Cardinals and Robins, and each girl will wear the insignia of the patrol on her uniform. In charge of the Blue Birds will be Trixie Lang; the Cardinals, Eloise Lamoreaux, and the Robins, Evelyn Hensley. The troop management will still be in charge of Lyda Chenoweth, who has filled this place for the past four years. All badge work will be accomplished at patrol meetings and the general meeting on Friday will be given over to recreational and miscellaneous activities. A contest between patrols will be started beginning the first of the month, and the winning patrol will be given a free outing each month.

Those attending the investiture Friday besides the members of the troop were: Mrs. Martin Baker, Mrs. Owen Rose, Mrs. F. L. Martin, Mrs. Wilbur Payne, Mrs. Milo Pope, Mrs. Richard Riggs, Mrs. Clifford Parrott, Mrs. Gordon Epps, Mrs. LeRoy Jones, Mrs. Icel Clark and Miss Erma Martin. Brownie leaders with their troop were June Watson and Thelma Jones. Leader Lyda Chenoweth, Counselors Evelyn Hensley and Trixie Lang of the older troop were also present. Refreshments were served potluck by the girls of the older troop and were assisted in "clean up" by the Brownie troop.
