DIAL LOG

By SUSAN Maybe it's time we settled down to some work, but, with invasion news, bond sales and Victory centers to think about, it seems that regular programming sort of takes a back seat in the order of importance.

INVASION AND WAR BONDS

By Charles V. Stanton

"I wonder if this invasion was timed with the Fifth War Loan drive," a skeptic remarked, recalling Jap atrocity stories, which were sprung on the public during the Fourth War Loan campaign, after being withheld from publication for many months.

If the invasion of continental Europe is to be considered as propaganda to spur bond sales, then we vote for more of the same. That's one kind of propaganda which merits approval.

We heard a radio commentator, quoting an army officer, who criticized a news report in which it was said that people "rejoiced" when they heard the invasion had started. This criticism we believe is unfounded. Certainly we rejoiced. Not in the fact that brave men were giving their lives in battle, nor that great sacrifice must be made. We rejoiced, rather, that the start of the invasion was convincing proof our military leaders, who have been ultra-conservative in their strategic moves, are convinced we have accumulated sufficient power to defeat the enemy.

So we rejoiced; but we also prayed!

"Wouldn't it be marvelous if we could raise our whole war bond quota in ten day," said George Trapalis, past post commander of the American Legion, an American by choice and not by accident of birth. "If our boys could be told we had subscribed the bond issue in just ten days they would fight like * * *." Well, we won't use George's language, but you get the general idea and will agree, we believe, that George is right. An athlete knows the value of a strong rooting section. Organized cheering is a part of every athletic contest. We can cheer on our soldiers by no better means than through the purchase of war bonds.

Our slogan during a former war bond campaign was "Back the Attack." This time it should be "Join the Invasion," for our dollars can fight side-by-side with the men in the front lines.

Just as the attack on Pearl Harbor united the nation in a defensive effort, so news of the cross-channel invasion has brought about greater unity for the offensive campaign which lies ahead. From all over the nation come "No Strike" pledges from labor. Production records are soaring to new peaks. Our Fifth War Loan is expected to reflect the spirit of optimism sweeping the country. Yet we must not become too optimistic. The war is not yet won. We are told that some production workers, believing that the invasion means quick victory, are quitting their jobs to obtain permanent postwar employment. There is great danger in a spirit of over-optimism. But there is no danger in an attitude of self-confidence and determination.

Much fighting remains. Even a rat will fight when cornered. How much more dangerous, then, are madmen knowing their lives are the forfeit of defeat.

We are extremely proud of the men and women who make up the News-Review and KRRR staffs. Olive Iles, who handles war bond sales and payroll deductions for our organization, turned in more than the News-Review-KRRR quota the first day of the Fifth War Loan drive in Douglas county. Not only did our organization respond in most commendable fashion, but Mrs. Iles sold several thousand dollars worth of bonds outside our own group, these sums being over and above the pledges from News-Review company employees.

pinch-hitting at the piano) put on a swell show—and were we proud! Some folks are just plain nice to work with—a big bouquet to our crew for the swell job they did. Well, to settle down, tonight's Double or Nothing at 6:30 originates from the Billings Memorial hospital in Indianapolis, in honor of 20th Century Fox's new picture, "Back Home in Indiana." And, of course, tonight is the night for your favorite "Name That Song" at 8:30. Saturday's program moves Hawaii Calls back to their old 3:30 spot in the afternoon, with news and music moving in to the 7:30 evening spot. King Cole, pianist on the famous King Cole trio, will be Al Jarvis' guest on "Downbeat Derby" for Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, when the platter spinner emcees his program on 1490. Be sure to listen in because there's some good music—there always is. In the meantime keep tuned to 1490. It's the spot where you'll always find the hottest news and when there's anything special, just remember we'll be on the air.

Prune Tomatoes To Save Space in Small Gardens

In Victory gardens totaling less than 1,500 square feet in area, tomatoes should be staked, or trained to a fence.

If your garden lacks a fence, stakes should be prepared with care in advance of setting the plants. Tomato stakes must be sturdy, at least 1 by 2 inch material, five or six feet long, and pointed at the bottom so they can be driven a foot into the ground.

Single stakes can be used, but a better way is to nail three cross pieces to the stake. The tomato plant is set at the foot, and only two branches are allowed to develop.

The tomato plant starts with a single stem which forms leaves. Then at the place where each leaf joins the stem, a branch develops. One of these branches close to the base should be allowed to grow, and all others pinched out while they are tiny, until the plant approaches the top of the stake. Then pruning can be stopped.

Use Care in Tying Tomato plants must be carefully tied to the stake, as they are not naturally climbers and have no tentacles. Raffia, or heavy cord which will not cut the stem, should be used, and tied with a loose loop around the stem.

If your tomatoes are not to be pruned and staked, it will save some space to grow small-vine, or determinate varieties, which stop growing after the stems are about two feet long.
