Russians mean by a "settlement," but we can understand 24,000 Germans killed in one day.

THE Russians report MANY German prisoners streaming back to the rear. At Cherbourg, 9,000 Germans surrendered to our Americans on the day of capture...

Watch this prisoner business carefully. It is our most dependable reflection of German morale.

A big infantry battle is being fought on Saipan. The Jap positions are described as "brutally strong," set in the worst terrain yet encountered in the Pacific war.

Their navy has failed to relieve them, so the Japs left on Saipan have to fight it out on land. Barring a rabbit pulled out of the hat by the Tokyo high command, it will be only another Jap suicide stand.

But it will claim American lives.

MAC ARTHUR announces inconspicuously the formation of a Far Eastern air force. Note to the Japs in the Philippines and nearby: "Watch out; it's coming soon."

GERMAN rocket bombs continue to fall in England. We learn from London that eye injuries caused by shattered, flying glass stand at the TOP of the injuries so far inflicted. (Too many people watching the show from their windows.)

TAYLOR, the Pocahontas singing cowboy, finally wins the democratic nomination for senator from Idaho.

He says: "Now that I've shown I can get (democratic) votes with the queerest sort of campaign, I reserve the right in the future to sing, use sound systems, wear a cowboy hat or ride a horse."

O-o-o-h! Are we going to have another of that breed in congress!

THE republican national convention at Chicago was a big show. All political conventions are.

What you must decide for your self is whether sincere purpose and genuine patriotism lie at the root of what the men assembled in Chicago did and said. That is the test in this year of decision. Only fierce belief that what they did is EVERLASTINGLY RIGHT and MUST be done if America is to be saved will gain for the chosen republican leaders the confidence and trust of the American people.

Without that, they can't win. With it, there is nothing they can't do.

This phrase from Gov. Warren's keynote speech is a gem: "We must put INDISPENSABLE"

PARTY TRADITION UPHELD

By Charles V. Stanton

COMPLETE with all the customs, traditions, oratory, ova-tions and demonstrations, the republican national convention has reached a decision on its ticket for the forthcoming presidential campaign. The nomination of Dewey as candidate for president was assured weeks ago, yet the convention went through all the expected ritual. The action with regard to vice-president was, perhaps, a surprise to many. At least it was conducted in traditional political form, the convention with all its ballyhoo, was in keeping with the formula we as a free people have adopted, ridiculous as it must appear in other nations where political meetings do not take on the semblance of a three-ring circus. There was no coercion of delegates. There were no voices from subterranean compartments. There was no interference with free political expression.

The republicans selected as their candidates two of the most outstanding political figures of their party, both contenders for top spot nomination, even though Dewey cannily refused to acknowledge his candidacy. Personally, we were somewhat disappointed by Warren's refusal to allow his name to go before the convention as a vice-presidential candidate, but we can see how his action has served to prevent a possible breach in party lines and his self-sacrifice has served, in our opinion, to broaden the G. O. P. chances for victory at the polls in November.

Dewey and Bricker provide the republicans with two men of vigor and courage. As an answer to opposition criticism of Dewey's youth, the republicans have fortified their position with the experience of Governor Bricker, who has proven himself one of the nation's best qualified administrative leaders.

We can now expect the "smear" campaign to be thrown into high gear. Untruthful rumors, personal vilification, and "grapevine" scandal probably will start the rounds of the country. The New Deal is unequalled in all history for its mastery of this art.

But it will be interesting to see how the democratic party fares at its forthcoming convention.

Where the republican meeting has shown harmony, unity and self-sacrifice, there is every indication the democratic meeting will have a harder time to whip its delegates into the pre-arranged parade.

The revolt of southern states against New Deal invasion of state's rights does not presage unity nor harmony. The choice of a candidate may be accepted as a foregone conclusion, if the president breaks the vow he made at the last election that he would not again be a candidate. His refusal to make the race would be in keeping with his conviction for the unpredictable and spectacular, but few political observers believe he will decline to seek a fourth term, unless he foresees possibility of defeat, an occurrence far from assured at the present time. Insofar as his pledge that a third term would be his last is concerned, the country is well aware of the president's predilection for breaking traditions and promises.

If the president is nominated, as it appears he will be, the selection of his running mate is apt to create spectacular fireworks. Delegates are still suffering pains from the manner in which the nomination of a vice-president was rammed down their throats at the last convention.

Another political possibility is a third-party move by Wilkie or Byrd, separately or together. In any event, the political scene of the next few weeks promises to afford plenty of interest and excitement.

BLE PRINCIPLES—once and for all—above INDISPENSABLE MEN.

Well, the convention fireworks are over for the time being, and the democrats open up some time in July, so you can rest up until then.

Gabe Heatter started out as copy boy in 1907 on the old Brooklyn Times-Union, worked up to a full time reporter, later went to London as correspondent for the old New York Tribune, won his spurs in radio with his coverage of the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

John Reed King of Double or Nothing show got started in radio when some broadcasting big-wigs heard him announcing a football game at Princeton university.

V. V. Harpham, director of the Umpqua National forest, will resume his broadcast series tonight at 8:55 as part of the Male Quartette program, and will be heard regularly at that spot on Thursdays.

Freedom of Opportunity will be heard at a new time for tonight only—7:30. Next week the show moves back to Tuesday night at 8:30.

Here comes the Band, full half hour of military band music, is on tonight at 8.

Friday's highlights: Jack Borch at 10:15, Wheel of Fortune 11, western stuff with the Merry Moons at 4:15 (every afternoon), Safety Legion (kiddies) 4:30, Double or Nothing 6:30, Tod Grant gets the Story at 8:15.

Something has gone wrong with Name That Song—didn't show up in this week's publicity releases for Friday and a program titled China's Triple Seven is scheduled. Don't give up, it may be re-instated.

Opposes Family Barrier in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, June 29—(AP)—Need no longer exists of continuing the army's policy of evacuating wives and children of service men in Alaska or prohibiting their return to the territory, George Folta, counsel-at-large for the Department of the Interior, asserted today.

Folta came here during injunction proceedings by Helen Fry, of Kodiak, against Lieut. Gen. Simon B. Buckner, Jr., commanding officer of the Alaska department, and other officials to restrain them from evacuating her because she married a soldier.

Folta said in a statement the "progress made in the Pacific" and the detrimental effects on Alaska population growth were reasons for abandoning the policy. "If (the department) believes evidence will be produced in the case to convince all that the necessity of evacuating or prohibiting the return of wives and children of service men no longer exists," he said.

Lieut. Ialo Stephens, Jr., Here on Surprise Visit

Lieutenant Ialo D. Stephens, Jr., arrived in Roseburg yesterday for a surprise visit with his mother, Mrs. Elma Stephens; his sister, Marge, and his father, Ialo D. Stephens, of the Stephens Auto company.

Lieutenant Stephens served two and one-half years with the Canadian Royal Flying forces, where he was assigned to anti-submarine patrol in the Newfoundland area. He transferred in May to the U. S. army air forces, stationed at Tampa, Fla., and has been assigned to Dodge City, Kas., where he is to undergo transition service to B-26 bombers. He was granted a short leave prior to reporting to his new station.

ISAW By PAUL JENKINS

HARLAN CARTER and I traversed Thorn prairie while we were visiting in the upper North Umpqua district—at least we went as far as Winter Knight camp; we could drive there. Beyond, the old Bradley trail leads through a couple of miles of thorn bush and meager stands of timber to the river. Immediately across the river lies one of the most beautiful camping spots in the mountains, canopied by tremendous trees and cooled by pleasant breezes even during the hottest days. Overhanging it, upriver, is the brow-like promontory built up through the centuries by the deposit of the North Umpqua hot springs, where the aborigines bathed, if they ever bathed. The temperature of the water is just right for a bath, anyhow, and several "tubs" are kept scooped out of the formation just for this purpose. One such is enclosed in a hut or shed for privacy. If you care for more privacy than that afforded by some hundreds of thousands of acres of wild, remote mountain country populated for the most part only by deer and bluejays. Above and to the north of the hot springs lie Mountain mead-
