Invasion Speed In France Short Of Expectations

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 7—(AP)—The allied invasion of France has not lived up to the expectation of many of its planners, who had estimated the assault would progress more rapidly than it has.

Officers made no secret of this today, but at the same time hastened to say that the western front, after one month of fighting, could not be described as "unsatisfactory."

"After all, we have landed and established a front and a month ago, we were none too sure whether we could do that," one officer said.

That progress has been slow is attributed to a number of reasons by various officers. The chief reason that emerges is that the Germans have reacted violently and fought fanatically for each foot of ground—in Russian style.

The worst June weather in 25 years blocked the allies from using air superiority to the full extent and a channel gale caused considerable damage in unloading operations.

The weather was at its worst during the early unloading stage—sufficient supplies and troops early in the campaign might have paid big dividends before the Germans could get set.

Aides Employed for Roseburg Church Work

Walter Naff of Zillah, Washington, and Rose Mary Fishback of Roseburg, both students at Northwest Christian college, Eugene, have been employed by the Roseburg Christian church and will be in charge of the choir work and will assist in the young people's work of the church. Mr. Naff is a music major and tenor soloist, Northwest college, and has been the high tenor on the college male quartet the past two years. Miss Fishback has majored in pipe organ and piano at the University of Oregon the last three years and has been assistant piano instructor at the Bible college during the winter and spring terms of the present year.

Mr. Naff plans to organize a community boys' chorus for boys from the age of 9 to 12 and Miss Fishback will conduct an "all-girl" program for girls similar to the boys' program conducted by Rev. Len B. Fishback. The two young people will begin their work in the local church next Sunday.

Marked Salmon Take Increasing Sharply

ASTORIA, July 12—(AP)—A record number of the Columbia river salmon which were marked at the time they were released from the spawning grounds have been recovered in the last month.

Floyd G. Bryant, U. S. fish and wildlife service biologist, said fish buyers had turned in marked fins of nearly 800 salmon since June 12—equivalent to the average half-year's record.

Marking experiments have increased sharply during the last few years, with federal bureau alone releasing some 500,000 marked salmon.

War Costs United States $170,235 Per Minute

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—War casts to the United States ran to $170,235.65 a minute in the fiscal year. This was at the rate of $245,139,344.20 for each of the 366 days, a leap year accounting for the extra day.

On the basis of seconds, the war cost $2,837.26 plus for each second of the year.

GUARDING OUR FUTURE

By Charles V. Stanton

ANNOUNCEMENT by E. K. Peterson, district forester for the O. & C. administration, that 24 sustained yield units have been established in Douglas county is news which should be welcomed by every person interested in the future of the timber industry.

The barren wastes left in the wake of sawmill operations in many other parts of the country provide a sorry spectacle. It can happen here! We can permit our glorious hillsides to be converted into tangles of greasewood, fire weed, vine maple and worthless scrub trees, or we can regulate cutting so there will be a perpetual supply of merchantable timber, while, at the same time we protect our scenic resources, our recreational areas, our sources of water supply and fish and game life.

We have in past years bemoaned the fact that industry was passing us by, but we have been fortunate, indeed, that our timber development has been delayed until the present era with its new policy of sustained yield, utilization of wood waste and stress upon new manufacturing processes.

Through efficient application of the sustained yield policy of forest management, we can maintain a stable industry throughout all the years to come, in place of having our hills stripped of their cover while industry moves on to new fields of activity, leaving behind ghost towns in the midst of a scene of desolation.

The O. & C. sustained yield program involves only a part of Douglas county timber lands. Included in the 24 units comprising the Roseburg area is a timber stand amounting to 22,596 billion feet as compared with a total stand of 71,360 billion feet for Douglas county as a whole.

The O. & C. administration and the national forest service, combined, control approximately 64 per cent of all timber lands in Douglas county, the O. & C. administering 31 per cent while the forest service supervises 33 per cent.

Douglas county, which a few years ago held one per cent of all the timber lands, now has only a fraction left, but the county court has very wisely shown preference to those purchasers who have agreed to combine their holdings with sustained yield units.

An interesting factor in Mr. Peterson's announcement is that private owners are grouping their holdings with O. & C. tracts for sustained yield management. This is proof that at least a part of the industry itself is interested in conserving the source of supply.

But there are still many organizations which have only one aim, that of cutting as much timber as possible within the shortest space of time, making their profit and moving on. New ways are not learned over night, and many lumbermen, who practiced their trade in days when prodigal waste was considered a part of the game, are not taking kindly to new-fangled notions of sustained yield, selective cutting, tree farming and wood waste utilization.

A great deal of political pressure will probably be applied at some future date in an effort to break down our sustained yield program. There will be charges of discrimination against small operators—firms unable to support sustained yield tracts—and favoritism for wealthy corporations and monopolies. The plight of the small operator, when privately-owned timber becomes exhausted, will merit sympathy, and there is danger that public support for conservation methods may be weakened.

But our welfare lies in a realistic approach to the problem, pointing to strict sustained yield regulations on all public timber and as much of the privately owned timber as can be brought under the same type of management. The announcement that the O. & C. administration has made a start in that direction should be welcome news to everyone concerned with the county's future.

Polio Treatment Receives Defense

PORTLAND, July 13—(AP)—Defense of the Sister Kenny paralysis treatment was offered by Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, here.

The famed Australian nurse's system of treating paralysis by physical therapy was under fire by seven doctors who reported to the American Medical association that her treatment had not prevented or decreased the effects of the disease in 650 cases they studied.

"Our foundation has spent over a half million dollars testing and evaluating the Kenny treatment and making the good of it available to the public," said O'Connor, who was formerly a law partner of President Roosevelt.

He credited the Kenny treatment "which is not advanced as a cure" with considerable merit. "This controversy has stimulated a great deal of research and investigation, and some of our greatest medical discoveries have come as a result of controversies."

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN.

Dear me, how our town does grow and change—new faces, new places, new sponsors. Well, it's grand and we like it. We like to meet new friends, and the bustle and activity round-about is most gratifying. We just hope that we don't lose the small-town touch of neighborliness—M. Pengra and Sinclair Lewis to the contrary, we love it. The new sponsor for Cedric and Fulton Lewis Jr. brought all this to mind, and for some reason (I guess it was talking about neighborliness) it brought to mind an incident that couldn't happen any place except in a small radio station. A few days ago a little girl lost her puppy and she called on the station to help her find it. As a matter of fact the pup had just crawled back under the house. But can you imagine that happening in a metropolitan station? You know we have a service just especially for the children. It's not open to you grown-ups. You have to pay the regular rate — but we always do our best to help the youngsters when they lose their pets. So, keep it in mind kids—we're not Superman, but we'll try.

Well, as we were saying when we went off on this tangent, Cedric Foster on Tuesday and Thursday mornings and Fulton Lewis, Jr., on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights now have a local sponsor. Just listen in and you'll soon be very conscious of a new business in town. Aside from all this there's Music You Remember at 6:30; and Cisco Kid at 7:30; Here Comes the Band at 8:00 o'clock tonight. Don't overlook Music for Remembrance tomorrow afternoon at 130 either—that's one of our favorite half-hours all week.

Oregon Cheese Shippers Told of California Law

SALEM, Ore., July 7—(AP)—Persons shipping cheese into California must either have their product pasteurized or it must have been made from pasteurized products, unless the cheese has been allowed to ripen for 60 days, the state department of agriculture said today in explaining a new California law.

In peacetime, almost all of Oregon's surplus cheese is sold in San Francisco and Los Angeles. During the war, surpluses not set aside for the overnment are sold in those markets. In 1943 Oregon sold almost 9,333,000 pounds of cheddar cheese in the two markets.

Tax Fraud Victims to Get Delinquent Bills

PORTLAND, July 7—(AP)—More than 500 Oregonians who paid their 1943 income tax to Income Tax Service, Inc., instead of to the government, will receive delinquent bills this week, state income tax officials said.

Operators of Income Tax Service, Nixon O'Neil Christy and Mary Booker Siddorn, were indicted last fall by the grand jury on a charge of fraud.

The taxpayers who mistakenly paid the private concern the full tax rather than a fee for tax computation will not be charged delinquent penalties, state officials said, but the tax itself must be paid.

Sheepherders' Sugar Ration Upped by OPA

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—Sheepherders may now get a pound and a half of sugar each month in addition to the usual ration.

So ruling today, OPA explained that herders use unusually large amounts of cereals since they lack kitchen facilities in the outdoors and thus require more sugar than they are able to get with regular rations.
