This is a carburetor

THE job of an egg beater is to mix things. And that's exactly the job of your carburetor... mixing about 10 thousand gallons of air into every gallon of gasoline your engine uses.

When that "egg beater" under the hood gets out of adjustment, your car bucks. Or chokes itself to death when you suddenly step on the gas. Or goes phfft in traffic, while a line of morons in back of you lean on their horns.

Now Shell isn't in the carburetor tinkering business, but we can help the carburetor stay healthy. We do it by removing the goo from another gadget—the air cleaner.

This device perches on the top of the carburetor trapping the dust and bugs floating in those 10,000 gallons of air so they won't clog up the carburetor. But when the air cleaner itself gets clogged your engine breathes in harmful grit and stuff, causing real damage.

Shell people have a knack with air cleaners. And they also know all about Shellubrication... a service designed to prevent your car from joining the 150,000 that are junked every month by Wartime Stop and Go driving.

GIRLS... A SECRET!

Cars aren't mysterious at all, as you'll see when you read Alice in Motorland. Your FREE copy awaits at the nearest Shell pump.
