

Winter Grain's Harvest at End; Corn Needs Rain

PORTLAND, Aug. 25—(AP)—A virtually completed harvest of winter grain over large areas of Oregon was reported today by the U. S. weather bureau.

Weekly crop-weather survey said that much spring grain has also been harvested, despite some local delays because of morning dew. Irrigated corn was described as good, but late in eastern counties. Unirrigated corn needs rain.

Harvest of Bartlett pears, peaches, and Italian plums was well under way last week, and watermelons began appearing in markets. The bureau reported nuts in good condition.

Late haying, as well as cutting and threshing of grass and legume seed, progressed during the week. Cattle were turned out into stubble fields in some areas, and unirrigated pastures continued drying. Eastern Oregon range feed was holding out well, however, in large areas.

The bureau reported sugar beets thriving, and sugar beet seed being harvested. Hop picking continued, and onions joined potatoes and celery in moving to market. Beets, beans and corn were being canned.
