Home Pressure Groups, Seeking to Ease Wartime Restrictions, Make Life Very Tough for Congressmen

By CLAIR JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26. (AP)—Your congressmen blame most of their increasing gray hairs these days on the unusually heavy flow to Washington of home-town pressure groups.

The visiting groups, it seems, have almost doubled since the war's start, because of price control, rationing, restrictions, etc.

Coping with the old-line, professional lobbyists who have headquarters here is hard enough, the legislators say, but satisfying the "amateur" button-holders is really tough.

For one thing, the visitors usually are asking for changes in federal agency directives rather than special legislation. They want prices boosted on milk, or tobacco or boxcars. They want a WPB priority, or exemption from an OPA order.

This means the congressman has to "out the pressure" on someone in a downtown bureau. Frequently he doesn't know the official. That makes it tough. But the biggest stumbling block is the fact that he's bucking all sorts of war complications.

Most of the time the "we want this" men supply an imposing array of facts and figures. But, generally speaking, they don't get far except on minor matters.

OPA Proves Tough
OPA has been particularly tough. Frequently OPA officials will acknowledge some local injustice is being done. But they'll decline to act on the grounds that such action would destroy the balance of the national picture. One leak in the dam can let in lots of water.

Many of the congressmen get in water and putting in a hot water system.

Miss Dorothy Casebeer of Roseburg is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Jess Marr.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hammond and baby son left Thursday to return to their home in San Francisco after visiting here with Mrs. Hammond's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Schoss.

seas to join in the showdown battle for Europe.

The taking of Brest would be of even greater significance in a military sense than the liberation of Paris since Brest is needed for the same role it served a quarter of a century ago—the towing and supplying of American forces.

The submarine lairs of Lorient and St. Nazaire, on the south coast of the Breton peninsula, are waiting cleanups as well.

Siege Line Braced

Neutral reports told of tens of thousands of foreign laborers being rushed to strengthen the Siegfried line. Nazidom's last hope of keeping the allied tide from the fatherland. Adolf Hitler was reported in conference with his military and political advisers at Berchtesgaden, surveying the ruins of Nazi hopes on all fronts.

The Germans were expected to establish a new line in the historic area reaching from the mouth of the Somme river on the channel southeastward 250 miles to the uplands of the Haute Marne department. Along the Seine the pocketed Germans lost Elbeuf in the American drive to the river's mouth, and the Yanks have made contact with British and Canadians driving from the other side.

Speed of the American advance and word of a general German withdrawal north of Sens suggested Marshal von Kluge had no forces to risk short than two months.

Pilots over northern France reported the battered Germans pulling their forces from the robot bomb coast, and London experienced not a single robot alert in the 24 hours ending at 7 a. m.—the first such respite in more than two months.

De Gaulle Orates in Paris

French broadcasts from Paris last night announced its liberation and said the German commander had signed a capitulation order, but Berlin said today fighting still was in progress.

Arriving in the French capital, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation, said last night: "Paris is free now—freed by the hands of Frenchmen—the capital of fighting France, of France, the great eternal."

Though Paris has been liberated and the Germans chased from much of France "we will not rest or be satisfied until we enter—as is our only right—upon the enemy's own soil as conquerors."

De Gaulle added:

France, he said, "will take her place among the great nations which will organize the Peace."

In Italy the Germans were withdrawing toward Gothic line fortifications, as allied forces registered new gains.

tion, which is—so the story goes—why some shore leaves were granted.

"Although I am a democrat, this report and this situation transcends purely party considerations and if the story is true, some of this heat certainly should be taken off Admiral Kimmel and General Short (Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, army commander in Hawaii at the time of Pearl Harbor). On the other hand, if it is not true, then the report should be promptly scotched by an immediate and official denial here in Washington. The circulation of such reports as this is not healthy."

"Not only are these reports not healthy, but they cause a lot of ill-founded rumors concerning the operation of the navy prior to Pearl Harbor."

Magnuson's assertions drew from the state department the following statement:

"At no time did Kurusu during the course of his visit here in 1941—or did any other Japanese representative—raise a question with this government that the disposition of our naval forces in the Pacific was likely to prejudice the success of the conversations then taking place between the two governments."

"Furthermore the state department did not at any time raise this question with the Navy or War department."

On June 6th, this young fellow tackled the biggest, toughest, most audacious military venture of all time—and he's pulling it off.

But how's our invasion going?

We've got one on our hands—just as much as any soldier. Don't think for a minute that every one of us here hasn't a personal share in the job of breaking into Hitler's Europe and battering down the Wehrmacht.

There's not much glory goes with our part of the job. Not much pain or danger, either. Our part is to pay—to pay with cash instead of blood.

Our part is to buy War Bonds.

But if you have the idea that our part isn't important—that the little bit that you personally can do—that the Bonds you buy don't really matter very much—get it out of your head.

The supreme military effort of the war must be matched by a supreme financial effort here. That means every man and woman in this country has got to put more money into Bonds—often—than ever before in this whole conflict!

Make no mistake—we've got to get that money up, now!

If you want to know how the Invasion's going —don't expect to get the whole story from your paper. Look at your own Bond buying—for a big part of the answer!

And here are 5 more reasons for buying Extra War Bonds!
