Yankee Raid On Formosa Bags 221 Nippon Planes

American bombs were a 23 airplane raid on Formosa, the largest islands in the Pacific, and 221 Japanese planes destroyed.

Loss of 221 airplanes, a 30-mile blow to Japanese defenses, but comparative smallness of the number once again emphasizes how pinched the enemy's resources are for airplanes.

Formosa is one of the largest islands in the Pacific, and is 98 miles wide. Strong defenses would deter the thought of airplane attacks.

On the fact that only 22 U. S. aircraft were shown as the strongest possible evidence that the enemy could have sent comparatively few more interceptors than American pilots destroyed.

American airmen bombed and strafed Formosa from end to end. Nimitz reported they did "extensive damage to hangars, buildings, oil dumps, warehouses, docks and industrial establishments."

Smashes Widespread Never before has so much power been unleashed in such a brief period against Nippon.

Expanding this offensive picture, a bomber armada completely knocked out plants supplying the enemy war machine with aviation gasoline and oil at Balikpapan on Borneo and American invaders of the Palaus went on to their 12th island in the south end of those stepping stones to the Philippines.

Adm. Nimitz announced last night that "a large force of carrier aircraft" bombed Luzon in the Philippines Tuesday. He did not identify the targets but his reference to attacks on "enemy airbases" might be taken to mean the Manila area, twice hit in September, again was the target.

on their way to the diglines after a mass call-up of age groups between 16 and 65.

While the campaign in Hungary took on the appearance of a pushover offensive, East Prussia and the remainder of the German front of the Baltic coast was a heavy slugging match all the way. Ragged assaults carried the Russians within five miles of the eastern limits of Riga and slashed into the strong defenses of Memel on the Baltic coastline.

Bricker Talks to 3,000 During Stop in Roseburg responsibility for world security.

"If we assume the responsibility like we did in the Philippines we must not leave it to the mercy of ruthless countries," he said.

In his Bremerton speech he expressed opposition to the surrender of "strategic military bases and establishments" for which our sons have died and for which we have spent our wealth of natural resources.

This nation, he remarked, should adopt the seabees motto of "we defend what we build."

Bricker spoke last night in Eugene after his special train was welcomed with a rally of University of Oregon students, carrying torches and signs reading "Hi Yah, Bricker" and "Don't be a Kicker—Vote for Bricker."

The rally was sponsored by the University Young Republicans club and Traffic Officer Paul Swell estimated approximately 1,000 persons were in the crowd.

The vice presidential nominee, speaking in MacArthur court auditorium, renewed his attack on "bureaucracy" with the statement that "we need a house cleaning at Washington, and the new deal can't do it."

"We should not indict the bureaucrats themselves," he said, because many of them are "trying to do a job" honestly and patriotically.

Rather he added "what we need to indict is the bureaucratic system itself."
