POSTWAR AVIATION

By Charles V. Stanton

WE were present recently at a meeting where a representative of a large oil company discussed a brochure designed to aid municipal governments in locating and building airports.

There is no question but that we will enter upon a new era in the field of aviation immediately following the war, but we must not permit ourselves to be carried away on a wave of enthusiasm unjustified by fact.

Manufacturers are designing fool-proof private planes which will go into production immediately after the war. These planes will probably be no more difficult to operate than the family automobile and will be fully as safe.

But there are certain limitations to the use of an airplane for dependable transportation.

The small private plane, available at a price within the reach of the average individual, cannot be equipped with the expensive instruments needed for flying in fog or heavy weather. Nor will the average private flier have the training to fly in such weather.

We believe there will be a great deal of sports flying.

Planes will be used for trips to lakes, seashore, hunting and fishing resorts, etc. Many people who can afford the luxury of a private plane for vacation trips will have them. Other persons will want planes just for the exhilaration of flying and probably will seldom attempt cross-country flights of long duration.

Because of our weather conditions, mountainous topography and other deterrent factors, there will probably be a minimum of private flying in Douglas county, as compared, for instance, with southern California, where there are fewer wet and foggy days and more level terrain.

This, consequently, must be considered in our postwar aviation planning.

But we are making a great error if we fail to consider commercial possibilities. Commercial craft will be equipped with instruments to permit flying in all except the heaviest of weather. Commercial planes will be piloted by capable and experienced pilots, of which there will be an abundant supply following the war.

We expect here in Douglas county a great industrial expansion. Men who head industrial enterprises are busy men. They are men who use the fastest possible means of transportation. Cost is a secondary consideration to speed.

Furthermore, we have agricultural commodities which adapt themselves to aerial transportation. We will, in our opinion, be making a great error if we fail to develop grower cooperatives, making use of modern packaging methods, to benefit from the superior quality of our prunes, melons, turkeys and other products placed on eastern markets in fresh condition.

The air age is upon us. Wideawake communities throughout the nation already are engaged in postwar aviation planning. Those who provide facilities will be first to reap benefits. We should be giving very careful study to our local problems, determining as best we can the factors that are most essential, and planning to meet them to the limit of our ability.

The Roseburg chamber of commerce already has examined into the problem extensively and has a good aviation committee at work. But it is not a problem for Roseburg alone. Our agricultural industry should be doing some serious thinking concerning advantages offered by aerial transportation. Our agriculture has been badly handicapped in past years because of freight rate differentials by rail or highway.

The agricultural industry should not expect the chamber of commerce to do all the planning or all the work. The industry knows its own needs and has the brains to determine the best program to be adopted. The chamber of commerce has the contacts and technical information. Through proper cooperation, Douglas county can take a place in the forefront in applying postwar aviation development to its own peculiar conditions and resources.

plenty of it in Italy. Europe will be far from happy and peaceful even after the German war ends.

HERE is an interesting little item from Chicago: "Reports of allied gains in Germany gave rise to APPREHENSIONS in the grain futures markets today (Friday) and prices broke sharply in the final minutes of trading when 'longs' began to liquidate rather than carry their holdings over night."

That indicates a significant trend in dollar thinking about the food supply. It is fairly obvious that the grain traders think there is a lot of grain in the world and that SURPLUSERS will begin to appear as soon as the German war ends.

Magnesium is so weak in its pure state that a small boy could bend a half-inch bar, yet it is so tough as an alloy that it will stand the shock of landing a 30-ton warplane.

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN

Don't overlook the new "Songs of Good Cheer" this evening at 7:45. The Eye Witness News series, that we've all enjoyed so much, has been concluded, and will be replaced by this new musical show. We'll have to be honest with you—we have a perfectly beautiful book of publicity on the show, with pictures and everything—and we can't find it. Of course, when we get moved there will be a place for every thing and, being a very neat and tidy soul, everything will be in its place, at least until the novelty wears off of having a gorgeous little office all our own. Any way, the program will be on at 7:45 tonight—we'd have auditioned the first show, but as you know, the station had a slight interruption of service this afternoon (Monday) and it sort of threw a monkey wrench in any plans we might have made for using turn-tables and such. You'll also hear Annaloris at 8:15, Esther Geddes at 6:30, Freedom of Opportunity 8:30 (with a salute to Billy Southworth, manager of the Cardinals, tonight) and Count of Monte Cristo at 10. Remember that Wednesday morning brings another Give-away Jamboree at 8:30, Lanny and Ginger at 8:55 and the gentleman with the British accent, Boake Carter, at 9. Sometimes we think Carter's almost our favorite commentator and then again he makes us so mad we'd like to blow a fuse. Anyway he keeps us interested one way or the other, so he must be good; besides, we love the way he tucks an "r" on the end of "Russian".
