Comedians Author Two of New Books At Public Library

Two of Filmom's outstanding comedians, Bob Hope and Joe E. Brown, are authors of books included in the latest batch added to the shelves of the Roseburg Public Library. Title of Hope's contribution to breezy literature is "I Never Left Home." Composed of about three-fourth humor in the best entertaining Hope style and one-fourth tribute to our soldiers, the story deals with the comedian's tour of more than 80,000 miles among the armed forces.

Brown steps out of his professional role as a fun-maker in authoring "Your Kids and Mine." Written after his own son was killed, Brown set out to entertain other people's boys, traveling as a trouper over 150,000 miles of battle fronts. He deals with grim realities in his narrative, including heart-grIPPING stories from hundreds of boys overseas.

A story of the various types of women who accompanied their men to the Pacific coast in the pioneer era, in which personal character is bared frankly to the eyes of the reader, is offered in "Westward the Women." Author is Nancy Wilson Ross, native daughter of the Pacific Northwest, graduate of the University of Oregon, later a student in Germany, where her writing incurred the wrath of Hitler's cohorts.

A word picture of postwar America, including subjects at issue in the current political campaign, is presented by Leo Cherne, executive secretary of the Research Institute of America. Title of his book is "The Rest of Your Life."

"Introducing Africa" is the title of a book written by Carveth Wells, distinguished explorer and author. The reader will gain accurate information about a continent which has been greatly misrepresented and beset by various misconceptions.

Lovers of fiction will find seven new books awaiting them, all by well known authors. Lack of space does not permit specific mention of the list.
