Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cooper, of Greens, who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary in the near future, were delightfully surprised and honored at the Evergreen grange meeting Monday night at the hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper headed the group going to the dining room and were placed at the guest table, where the grange members presented a beautiful set of gold-trimmed dishes to them; a lovely set of drinking glasses with gold trimming from a life-long friend, Sadie Sheridan, and a number of other attractive gifts from other friends. Mrs. Cooper responded to the group by thanking the friends for their kindness.

The Home Economics club chairman, assisted by the members of the grange served ice cream, cake and coffee.

Mrs. Harriman had charge of the decorations. At the lecture's hour, Elsie Spackman, presented speakers on topics of interest to rural districts. Grange chairman.

POET'S CORNER

A WELL-DRESSED LADY

(By Barbara V. Orr)
October just comes once a year,
When nature is really well-dressed.
She knows stormy weather is near,
And puts on her brightest and best.
Her gown is the trees that are old,
Surrounding her body so fair.
Each tree of her dress is a fold,
Tucked lovingly round with care.
The cloth is of gayest of plaids,
In splashes of yellow and brown.
She cares not for fashions or fads,
She knows its her favorite gown.
Her body is very well limbed,
With moss making cuffs for the sleeves.
The petticoat daintily trimmed,
With lace that a spider weaves.
The feet are most beautifully shod,
In slippers that always look new.
They're air-stepped with softest of sod.
While stockings are sheepest dew,
Air nature's head is the sky,
Her hair is a silvery white.
With diamonds you cannot buy,
The stars that are gleaming so bright.
A veil for her face is the fog,
With fragrance of frost for perfume.
There's a music made by a frog,
And crickets are always in tune.
October just comes once a year,
When nature is really well-dressed.
She knows stormy weather is near,
And puts on her brightest and best.

Deportation of Disloyal Aliens, Ban On Return of Japanese to Pacific Coast Asked by Central Labor Council

Resolutions urging deportation of disloyal aliens, opposing relocation of persons of Japanese ancestry on the Pacific coast and urging all union workers to remain on war jobs on VE-day, have been adopted by the Roseburg Central Labor council of the American Federation of Labor. The resolutions are signed on behalf of the council by Lester Williams, president, and Roy Hayden, secretary.

"This nation is founded upon the theory that every citizen has equal rights before the law and we believe thoroughly in that basic American conception," the resolution on deportation asserts. "We therefore believe that all citizens, regardless of race, creed or color, must have every right of citizenship protected. There is absolutely no reason, however, why this nation ought to offer sanctuary or hospitality to any person whose disloyalty is proved. There are very compelling reasons why such persons ought to be immediately deported or imprisoned when such facts are established, and we recommend that legislation to achieve such purpose be enacted. We believe that in carrying out these policies, American citizens will be amply protected in their rights and liberties and that the national security will also be protected against those who would seek to destroy this republic."

Says Northwest Deluded
The people of the Pacific Northwest have been deluded by the false friendship of the Japanese race, the council declares in its resolution on Japanese relocation. It points out that some employers have catered to workers of Japanese extraction, especially in food raising, processing and canning, to the detriment of American labor as well as the security of the nation. The council formally went on record, "opposing the return or relocation of any persons of Japanese ancestry to the state of Oregon and the Pacific coast."

"It has been the policy of the American Federation of Labor since the beginning of the war on Dec. 7, 1941, that all labor stay on the job regardless of difficulty which could be settled without loss of time," the resolution on no VE-day holiday asserts. "Local unions through the nation have adopted this policy and have stood by it since the beginning of the war. Union workers declared no holiday for D-day in France and the different beachheads that were established in that country and many of the islands retaken by the allies in the Pacific. The Roseburg Central Labor council therefore recommends to all union workers that they stay on the job VE-day, as the war will not be over for some time to come."

Soldiers' Wives and Returning Husbands

You may have seen in the papers where a writer cautioned Army wives that their returning husbands would be "strangers" to them—because they've been through experiences that their wives could never share.

Well, a high-ranking officer wrote an answer to that; he called it nonsense. "What do our men want most? To finish the war and come home... What are they fighting for?...for everything the word home means."

Of course, the word "home" means something different to every fighting man. For home is a lot of little things! A garden or a work bench—well-thumbed books... a mellow glass of beer with friends.

But whatever they are, it's the memory of these small familiar things that he takes with him into battle. And it's these little things that link his thoughts to home—and to the familiar life that he looks forward to returning to.
