democrats in both houses (especially in the senate) the ADMINISTRATION has never been sure of congress, which has gone along willingly in all vital matters relating to the conduct of the war but has balked frequently on administration DOMESTIC policies.

President Roosevelt's decisive victory on Tuesday will SHAKE the anti-New Deal block. He will have much less opposition in congress from here on.

THAT is just as well—perhaps MUCH better. We're fighting a war. When the war ends, we shall face immediate and pressing problems of reconversion and reconstruction.

It will be better for us if we face what is ahead of us with an UNDIVIDED government. There will be less passing of the buck. The administration's responsibility will be COMPLETE. It should be possible for our government to act with much less friction and delay.

In principle, at least, this is sound—for this is war time, and we need all the efficiency in government we can possibly get.

SO much for the KEY results of the election the things that count RIGHT NOW.

In ELECTORAL votes and in support in congress, President Roosevelt's fourth term victory is as impressive as ANY he has won. It is impressive enough to give him a CLEAR MANDATE to do whatever he chooses.

The popular vote is somewhat less impressive.

It appears as this is written that he will win by somewhat more than three million. He won from Hoover by more than seven million. He defeated Landon by more than TEN million. He bested Willkie by a little less than five million.

Hoover won from Al Smith by a little more than six million. Coolidge from Davis by more than seven million and Harding from Cox by a little better than seven million.

We have to go clear back to Wilson's victory over Hughes in 1916 (only 591,385) to find a POPULAR VOTE majority as small as FDR's on Tuesday.

THIS detracts in NO WAY from the magnitude of Mr. Roosevelt's personal achievement in this election. But it does mean that in the BACKGROUND there is a HUGE body of American public opinion (only slightly under a majority) that is DETERMINEDLY OPPOSED to the holding of power by one man too long.

That clear and definite fact, taken in connection with the fact that this was a war-time election and the further fact that the vote was encouragingly large, pretty well disposes of the fear that we shall have one-man government after Roosevelt.

That historic danger seems to have been averted.

AS soon as Tuesday's results are known Churchill announces that it is high time for another triple conference (Churchill-Roosevelt-Stalin).

He says: "The prospects of such a meeting have been vastly improved by the results of the presidential election in the United States" adding, quite significantly: "And for which we waited so BREATHLESSLY on Tuesday last."

AT this meeting, coming directly after the election, President Roosevelt will have all the great power to speak for and COMMIT the American people that is conferred by his decisive fourth-term victory.

Our hopes and our prayers go with him for never in our history has one man gone into such a poker game as this will be. With victory in Europe certain the stakes in this game will be big and it will be every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost.

THERE is nothing particularly new in the war.

We're still probing the German lines on the western front. The Germans are muttering about "preludes to the big offensive." The Russians are massing for a new blow in the east. The first snow of the winter falls in Holland.

In the Pacific, our boys on Leyte are fighting in a blinding typhoon against reinforced Japs commanded by the General Yamashita who took Singapore. He boasts, "I told the British commander at Singapore that 'all I want from you is yes or no' and I expect to put the same question to MacArthur."

A CHEER FOR ROSEBURG HI

By Charles V. Stanton

CITIZENS of Roseburg should be mighty proud of the students in our high school. The record achievement in last Friday's waste paper salvage drive is deserving of a big round of applause.

Adults, faced by the problems with which the high school boys and girls were confronted, probably would have gone home in despair, or would have turned in a half-hearted job. But the students made light of their discomforts and succeeded in loading out more than 70,000 pounds of waste paper, which soon will be converted into vital supplies for the war effort.

Wet, bedraggled, tired to the point of exhaustion, boys and girls, side by side, visited every home in Roseburg and surrounding territory, as they dragged out of hiding a huge store of waste paper and sent it on its way to war. The organizational plan called for the heavy work to be done by the boys, but, putting the lie to the "weaker sex" theory, the girls wrestled bundles and bales with equal, if not superior, efficiency with the boys.

The success of the drive was largely credited to careful organizational work. Girls, assigned to each residential block, conducted a canvass preceding Friday's collection. Collections were systematically made, block by block, private cars being used to provide transportation to dumps on through streets, with trucks making pickups at the substations.

The work was continued throughout the day in the face of a continuous light cold rain, which made the task exceedingly disagreeable. Yet there was no faltering.

The salvage committee which planned the drive, the school officials who had charge of the details of organization, and the students who performed the actual labor, are very appreciative of the cooperation given by the city's residents. Nearly every home joined in the project. For the most part, there was a sincere effort to aid the collectors by careful bundling and tying. But there were some instances in which persons took advantage of the students and added a great deal of hard labor which could have been avoided. Some persons made no attempt to bundle their waste paper. This may have been due, in some cases, to a misunderstanding based on previously published reports that grade school students were to assist in tying bundles. There were some cases in which insecure containers were used. As a result several tons of magazines, newspapers and other papers had to be handled as loose waste, greatly complicating collection and loading. In a few cases, students even went into basements and attics and gathered up the paper stored in those places.

It is mighty fine to know that our high school boys and girls can be depended upon to do such an efficient job in spite of inclement weather and other discouragements.

They have the satisfaction of knowing that their performance has been a very definite contribution to the successful conduct of the war. Soon packages of food, cartons of blood plasma, wrappings for ordnance, and numerous other materials of war will be going overseas in paper remanufactured from the salvage collected in Roseburg. This alone should be a source of great satisfaction and pride in a job well done.

Residents of Roseburg should be grateful for boys and girls who are willing to assume their place in matters of community responsibility. Too frequently we are prone to underestimate the latent power in our schools. At the same time we often fail to create among the students proper recognition of their duty toward society. The greatest curb to juvenile delinquency is found in giving young people a recognizable place in community life, where they may be made to feel they are contributing something to public welfare.

Students of Roseburg high school ably proved their ability by the way in which they conducted the waste paper drive. They collected nearly twice as much paper as any adult organization has been able to do in the past.

They should be proud of their achievement.

DIAL LOG

By SUSAN.

Well holiday time is over until a week from Thursday that's Thanksgiving time you know and from there it's just a whoop and a holler to Christmas time. So why not take a breather this week and enjoy some of the good programs coming your way on 1490? Tonight, for instance, there's Music You Remember at 6:30. Songs of Good Cheer at 7:45, a Date with Annaloris at 8:15, Freedom of Opportunity at 8:30 and the Count of Monte Cristo at 10. Tonight's Freedom of Opportunity will dramatize the life of Joe E. Brown. We've been reading quite a bit about him lately, especially his trips overseas to entertain the boys, so this half-hour show goes down as a don't miss on our listening schedule for this evening.

Speaking of morning programs, we are going to have to get up a bit earlier so we can hear that 7 o'clock news in the morning we've been hearing so much about how good it is. Lanny and Ginger at 8:55 are so good that we wish they would expand to a full fifteen minutes, but we must say that they pack more entertainment into five minutes than any two people we ever heard. Did you know that theirs is a full time partnership? Yes, it's Mr. and Mrs. in private life. Theirs should be a harmonious household, wouldn't you think?

Noted Authority On Far East Dated At Institute Here

Vanya Oakes, famed woman journalist and author, will be one of the principal speakers at the annual teachers' institute Thursday, Nov. 16, at the junior high school building in Roseburg. Miss Oakes, who recently completed a 50,000-mile trek through the Orient and Thailand (Siam) was scheduled when Dr. H. H. Chang, who had been previously engaged as institute speaker, was forced to return to Los Angeles because of the serious illness of his wife.

Miss Oakes, who has travelled in Malaya, Dutch East Indies, Tibet, Burma, Thailand, Chungking, Hong Kong, Singapore and the Philippines, and who personally knows General Douglas MacArthur and General Chiang Kai Shek, will speak on the subject, "The Far East and the Future."

"We anticipate Miss Oakes will interpret the Orient from an American point of view, giving us an interpretation of which an Oriental would be incapable," Lula C. Gorrell, county school superintendent, reported. "She has spent ten years in the Orient and Far East as a newspaper reporter and observer and her interpretation in the light of present-day happenings should be particularly interesting and informative."

Miss Oakes' lectures and other program features of the institute will be opened to the general public, Mrs. Gorrell states.

Amateur Program Held At Adventist School

The annual Amateur program, sponsored by the Seventh Day Adventist school, was presented in the school auditorium, Umpqua Ave., and Military road, at 8 p. m. Saturday. A capacity audience enjoyed the program at which Principal A. Butherus impersonated Major Bowes as master of ceremonies. Joan Marx was winner of the junior prize for her reading, "A Little Girl's Troubles." Mrs. Othal Cook received the senior prize for her song, "Play In Your Own Back Yard." A free-will offering for home and school projects amounted to approximately $70.

Pastor Sylwester to Remain at Church Here

At a special meeting of the voting members of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Sunday, it was decided to request W. A. Sylwester to remain in Roseburg as pastor of the local congregation and return the call extended to him recently by the district mission board of the Lutheran church. According to the call, Mr. Sylwester was to serve as pastor and traveling missionary in the Yakima valley, Washington, making his residence and headquarters in the city of Yakima. Mr. Sylwester has been pastor in Roseburg since the fall of 1931. Besides serving the local congregation, he also conducts services every Sunday at Cottage Grove.

Thanksgiving Dinner at Cafes Under Price Limit

PORTLAND, Nov. 13—(AP)—Persons eating Thanksgiving dinners in restaurants should pay no more than they did in 1943, Hosea Evans, district OPA price executive, said today.

He said that in no case could restaurants charge more than 15 per cent over their regular Sunday dinners.

National price regulations, he explained, provide that eating places may charge higher prices on holidays only if that is their custom.
