To Be Heard Here

Miss Mildred Dilling, world-famous harpist, will be heard in concert by the Roseburg Community Concert association Thursday evening, February 1, at Junior high school at 8:15 o'clock, instead of on January 31, as previously announced. The concert date was changed due to the fact of difficulties of transportation, as Miss Dilling will be unable to make accommodations to get her to Roseburg in time for concert on the scheduled date.

Mildred Dilling, "The harp on earth as it is in heaven" headlined New York's famous newspaper P. M. following her recent Town Hall recital. The critic went on "She makes her instrument produce sounds that may explain the harp's popularity beyoung the Pearly Gates."

Consensus of opinion wherever this foremost woman harpist appears can only echo these phrases. Each year adds to the list of her triumphs, her artistry everywhere renewing the age-old love of the harp. She has played in every state in the union, in Canada, Mexico, Cuba, Hawaii, the British Isles and Europe.

Any sketch of Mildred Dilling's life might well be entitled "Success Story." Her mother wanted to play the harp. Instead she gave one to her daughter when she was twelve, and Mildred began to study at the same time as her sister, Charlene, who is now a violinist of note. The Dillings lived in Indianapolis at that time, and Indiana's grand old men of letters—Booth Tarkington, Meredith Nicholson, and James Whitcomb Riley were friends and neighbors who encouraged the young musicians.

After study in Paris with Henriette Renie, the greatest French harpist and teacher, Mildred Dilling launched on her professional career. With her debut at the Salle Erard, Paris, she attained immediate distinction and gala concerts followed at the Trocadero, the largest concert hall in France, and at the Salle Gaveau.

Before returning to America she toured the continent and the British Isles, meeting everywhere with applause for her artistry and praise for the gracious and lovely personality always apparent in her playing. Until the present war she went abroad every summer for concert tours.

In America she was an instant success. Each year finds her with a long list of engagements across the continent, sometimes as many as seventy-five a season. She often appears with symphony orchestras, the Indianapolis Symphony, the Havana Philharmonic and the Montreal Symphony among others. Her New York recitals are brilliant events in the music calendar. She has played seven times at the White House.

Radio hook-ups have featured her extensively here and abroad. WEAF and WJZ presented her in series of harp recitals, and she has been guest soloist on the Kraft Hour and other coast to coast programs. She made several tours of all the BBC stations in the British Isles in recital and as soloist with the BBC Symphony Orchestra.

The harp is not only Mildred Dilling's profession, her art, but also her hobby. She collects ancient harps of every kind, makes arrangements, and compiles books of folk songs and classics for her instrument. Among her most famous pupils is Harpo Marx. Other activities include a movie made for Artists Films and several television appearances for the BBC and NBC. She records for Columbia in America and for H. M. V. in England. Recently a personality sketch of her appeared in the "Profiles" of the New Yorker, entitled Harp Lady.

Gardiner Firemen Are Guests of Lions Club

REEDSPORT — With the dining room filled to capacity, the Gardiner - Reedsport Lions club members moved their first meeting of 1945 to Thursday evening, rather than Tuesday, and had as their guests a number of members of the Gardiner fire department, a newly organized body in a new fire protection district. The Lions presented the new "smoke eaters" with a fine new fire alarm siren, guaranteed to send its rousing scream to the innermost recess of the district. The Gardiner firemen are now awaiting the arrival of much needed fire fighting equipment which has been promised by the state and the officials of Douglas county and have made their fire station ready to properly care for the same.

Navy Coxswain of Wilbur Awarded Silver Star Medal

Harold Francis Whitehead, chief boatswains mate, U. S. N., son of Mrs. Flossie F. Whitehead of Wilbur, Oregon, has recently been awarded the Silver Star Medal for "conspicious gallantry and intrepidity in action," according to announcement made by the Navy department.

His citation reads as follows:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while attached to the U. S. S. Barnett as coxswain of a tank lighter in the amphibious assault at Salerno, Italy, Sept. 9-10, 1943. When the boat officer of his craft was seriously wounded during an extremely perilous run to the beach in the face of intense enemy artillery fire, Whitehead unhesitatingly assumed the responsible duties and, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, skillfully piloted the boat to the assigned landing point and effected the successful, expeditious unloading of the vital cargo. His essential task completed, he later volunteered to serve as coxswain of a tank landing craft which had lost many of its crew. Whitehead's inspiring initiative and valiant devotion to duty throughout these hazardous operations contributed materially to the success of the assault and were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States naval service."

Filipinos Shy at Unctious Nippons, Lt. Rodley Writes

Filipinos were not "taken in" by Japanese attempts to win their confidence and approval, Lieutenant Irving Rodley writes in a letter to Mrs. Roy Buell of Lookingglass. Lieutenant Rodley is now serving with an engineer battalion with the army air forces in the Philippines. He is a former resident of Lookingglass and graduate of the Lookingglass high school.

The Japanese treated Filipinos fairly well and tried to win their cooperation, the lieutenant reports, but "the Filipinos are not ignorant so the Japs didn't do so well."

Schools were furnished for children, but the youngsters were taught only of the glories of Japan, the "New Order" and "what skunks the Americans were." They were taught to speak Japanese, but were not taught to write the language.

The American air force, Lieutenant Rodley reported, is having an easier time in the Philippines than in New Guinea. When a Jap plane goes down, it is just like watching the home team score, he writes.

At the time the letter was written he was quite discouraged over a project calling for construction of a roadway in soft clay, but expressed determination the work would be successfully completed.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

Consciously or unconsciously, each of us magnifies something, and the thing we magnify reveals our character. One magnifies self, another enlarges on his prejudices, while a third exalts his possessions. Each person who does this lives below the high standard of a true Christian. Paul found many things in which he might glory, but he declared to the Philippian church that whatever else happened, he would magnify Christ. To magnify Christ may demand sacrifice, of every Christian. For us to magnify Christ today means to show others something of His divine nature which means to bring Him closer to suffering humanity. As we magnify Christ, we make is possible for those around us to know, understand and appreciate Him more fully. To magnify Christ may demand sarrifice, it may require readjustments in our ways of living, but it is well worth the cost. We most fully live when we magnify Christ. We are epistles read of men, and consciously or unconsciously we reveal our relationships with Him. Amen.
