pending wars before they had time to get started.

He pointed out that America is moving into the position that Britain held then.

HE made a striking point.

It isn't sufficient, he said, to pile up a great armament. Russia did that in the more than 20 years when she was preparing for war if she had to fight. In spite of all that, she would have been beaten by Germany if America and Britain hadn't come to her aid WITH SUPPLIES.

It isn't enough, he concluded, merely to provide guns and ammunition for a vast army. The guns wear out and the ammunition is shot away.

What a nation has to do to win wars, he said, is to be able to replace its fighting equipment faster than an enemy can destroy it.

HE merely suggested, without dwelling on it, that Russia isn't yet such a power. She doesn't posses YET an industrial system capable of replacing her fighting equipment faster than an enemy can destroy it.

If that is true, Russia isn't YET capable of dominating the world in the way some people fear she may.

What may happen in the far future he didn't go into. He was dealing only with the present and the immediate future.

THERE are strategic materials —such as the alloys without which iron can not be made into steel. There is rubber. Altogether, there are 14 of these strategic materials which we do not posses in sufficient quantity. But they ARE possessed in sufficient quantity by nations (such as Britain) with which we are likely to be always friendly, and if we retain the unquestioned command of the sea we will have at the end of this war we will always be able to get them.

THERE remains then, he went on, the ALL-IMPORTANT question of MACHINE TOOLS.

Machine tools are the machines that MAKE THE MACHINES OF WAR. Without machine tools in sufficient quantity, no nation can hope to be able to replace its fighting equipment faster than an enemy can destroy it.

That raises this significant question: What is a sufficient quantity of machine tools?

He answered it flatly.

A sufficient quantity of machine tools, he said, is VASTLY MORE than ANYBODY ELSE HAS or can get in any reason able length of time.

In other words, what amounts to a monopoly.

THE nation, he said, that possesses what amounts to a monopoly of machine tools can dominate the world, and so can ENFORCE peace.

He urged, with all the eloquence at his command, that America retain her present tremendous lead in machine tool production—even, perhaps, going so far as to REFUSE TO SELL to others.

HE left it there. His time was limited, and he couldn't go on indefinitely.

But his clear implication was that only America possesses ideals unselfish enough to justify one nation holding the power to ENFORCE peace.

It was a challenging talk.

Is ANY nation fit to dominate the world?

Can there ever be peace unless some nation with high enough and unselfish enough ideals DOES dominate the world?

LEGISLATORS EARN MONEY

By Charles V. Stanton

PERSONS who think members of the Oregon legislature fail to earn the meager compensation afforded them by the state would change their minds if they had an opportunity to peek behind the scenes.

Sessions of both houses may seem tiresome and ineffective at times. Few hours are spent in actual session. Groups of senators and representatives may be seen, during recesses, grouped in conferences, dictating to secretaries or chatting with visitors.

Some strange sights are also to be observed, as, for instance, an occurrence in the senate chambers Monday.

A beautiful girl, clad in an old-fashioned nightgown, carrying a lighted candle and an open book, solemnly marched down the main aisle, mounted the platform and took her stand before the president's desk. She placed her book upon the desk, setting the candle to illuminate the pages and soberly intoned those immortal words: "'Twas the night before Christmas, etc." Flashlights blinked from all angles. Senators came to attention and gave far more interest than to the legislative proceedings. Afterwards they learned a girl from Willamette university was going through initiation ordeal. She received enthusiastic applause from the floor and the gallery.

But it is not in the legislative halls that one finds the real work of the legislature. A peek into the many committee rooms shows where our senators and representatives are truly earning far more than the small amount paid them by the taxpayers.

Committees confer on bills. Public hearings are held. Numerous conferences occur. Lights burn late in the statehouse. Legislators put in long hours. Their meal schedules are upset. Often they are unable to secure sufficient rest for days at a time.

Ws listened in on one public hearing where the committee was being given a vast amount of information and some misinformation; but, with an expertness that would do credit to any trial lawyer, members of the committee developed facts by expert questioning, weeding out data and opinions and evaluating their importance.

The work of a legislator is not easy. We imagine it would be most interesting. Over all there is a feeling of sincerity and honesty, a love of state and nation, and a definite attempt to accomplish the most good.

Of course, there are differences of opinion. There are some selfish interests. There is a good deal of politics. There is a certain amount of "grandstanding." These often overshadowing in publicity the more serious aspects.

You can be of much help to your legislators if you will give them a little cooperation. They complain that the people at home do not express themselves as they should. Those who want something are liberal with their letters. A good many writers are free with criticism. But how is a legislator to know what his constituents want if he is not informed? Numerous bills of a technical nature come before the legislature. There are tax matters, problems relating to schools, roads, highways, liquor control, truck regulations, fishing, game, forestry, to mention only a few. No member of the legislature could be fully informed on each and every one of those subjects. He needs expert advice. He needs facts and figures. He needs opinions. Also, it is not out of line to give him a' pat on the back when you think he has done or is doing a good job. A little "Thank You" note can pep up a legislator a great deal more than a kick-in-the-pants.

If you haven't written your senators or representatives in either the Oregon legislature or congress to give them the benefit of your knowledge or opinions, you have no right to bellyache if they vote against some measure in which you are interested.

DIAL-LOG

Tonight is the second appearance of Recital Hall of the Air — a 15 minute program from 7:30 to 7:45. Mrs. Homer Grow will present three of her pupils tonight — Betty Roach, Marshall Pengra IV and Aileen Slattery are tonight's artist's ..... so be sure to listen in.

Of course, one of the favorite shows of all week, Wings Over the Nation, is on the air at 9:30 tonight ..... we hope you will all enjoy it too. For tomorrow morning it's Take It Easy Time at8:30; Lanny and Ginger at 8:55 (best spot on the morning program, sez us); and news at both 9:00 and 10:00. We've been doing a lot of talking about all the new programs, program moves, and so on, and overlooked one of the most important time changes. When the new Morton Downey Show starts next Monday morning at 9:15, your old friend, The Man About Town, moves down to 9:30. Boy ..... come Monday, we're going to be listening for the 9:15 show although Morton Downey won't be on it. You see he just returned from a long trip overseas, doing a spot of entertaining for the boys, and now he is making a trip to Army and Navy Bases in this country. He'll be through with his present jaunt and be ready to take the spot on his new show on the 26th of February. In the meantime, they've lined up a pretty famous crew of pinch-hitters to take his place and regardless of who is doing the singing you'll enjoy the show because there will be David Ross, Jimmy Lytell and his orchestra, Lea Ray and the Jimmy Rule Chorus. Positively mouth-watering, isn't it?

Oregon Expansion of Credit Assn. Disclosed

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 1 (AP) — The eight Oregon branches of the Spokane Production Credit association supplied $13,051,281 in credit to 1,557 farmers last year, the corporation's annual report showed today.

About 43 per cent of the capital stock in the eight associations is now owned by Oregon farmers and stockmen, who have set their goal at 100 per cent, said E. E. Henry, PCA president here.

Capital stock investment now stands at $735,000 – A $78,435 increase over 1943 – although the Oregon members started from scratch 11 years ago, Henry reported.

Three of the Oregon branches paid a total $25,797 in dividends to members last year. The state's associations have $1,086,571 in reserve and undistributed earnings.

Mrs. M. Nielsen's Body to be Sent to Utah, Native State

The body of Mrs. Mitchell (Sarah Elizabeth) Nielsen, 60, resident of Coos Junction, who died at Mercy hospital Tuesday, was forwarded last night by the Douglas Funeral home to Spanish Fork, Utah, where services and interment will take place Sunday.

Mrs. Neilsen was born in Wayne County, Utah, September 21, 1884, and was married to Mitchell Nielsen at Spanish Fork in 1906. She came with her husband to Douglas County about a year and half ago, Purchasing the Riverside inn near Coos Junction. Mrs. Nielsen was a member of the Latter Day Saints church.

Surviving besides her husband are four children: Mrs. Rose F. Ashley, Brockway, Oregon; Mrs. Mary Louise Henderson, Idaho Falls, Idaho; Mrs. Alice M. Olsen, Clifton, Idaho, and De Lyle Batchlor, Wattls, Utah. She is also survived by a brother, Oscar David Turner, Ogden, Utah, and a sister, Mrs. Annie Worley, Wellington, Utah.

Charles Clark, Resident Of Camas Valley, Dies

Charles Clark, 55, well-known resident of Camas Valley and Tenmile districts, died suddenly yesterday at his home, from a heart attack. The body has been removed to the Douglas Funeral home and funeral arrangements will be announced later.

During the siege of Boston, the Harvard college buildings were used as barracks for the American army, and the college moved to Concord.
