

Motorists Urged To Save Cars By Summer-Proofing

Shortage Of Mechanics And Parts Complicates Repair Situation!

Inaugurating their annual Summer-proof campaign, Mobilgas and Mobiloil dealers of this city today joined industry in urging local motorists to avoid having their cars laid up temporarily or permanently because of some mechanical defect or breakdown.

"This is the fourth war summer," stated Mr. E. A. Pearson, "few of the new cars have come into the market in that time, and the majority of our cars today are nearly 10 years old. Many have left the highways already, and it is more important than ever to keep those that are left on the job so that workers may use them to keep on the job. Transportation is vital to our E. A. Pearson war effort."

"Several factors indicate the wisdom of greater care to prevent at least a temporarily laid up automobile. Automotive dealers are unanimous in their statements that the parts shortage will be acute this summer. Even now it is impossible to get many parts, and where they can be gotten there is often a delay of weeks or months. Coupled with this is the fact that there are fewer mechanics to service cars, and with all cars older, mechanical service has been increased many times. That is why it sometimes takes a week to a month to get a car repaired, even where no new parts are involved. "You may feel there is little danger of your car going off the road before the war's end. But there is great danger that you may have a mechanical breakdown, and your car may be laid up anywhere from a week to several months before it can be put back on the road again."

"In many cases this can be avoided by proper care of your automobile, and Summer-proofing is designed to do just this. Realizing that it will be difficult or in some cases impossible for workers to keep on the job unless they keep their cars on the job, too, Mobilgas dealers have organized to give prompt and effective service to prevent the breakdowns and delays which may follow if automobiles are not given proper periodic care."

When Car Goes "Off the Job"

Here's a situation that may face war workers and motorists generally when they neglect car upkeep. Photo is of Chli Williams, RKO starlet.

Blighted

MILWAUKEE, April 30—(AP)—The lot last year produced food in victory gardens to feed two families. A newly-erected billboard this year shades practically all the area. The sign, big and bright, urges victory gardening.

Tires And Battery Need Care To Keep Car On Job

"You can't keep your car on the job unless you keep your tires and battery on the job" is the warning of E. A. Pearson, local Mobilgas and Mobiloil distributor. "No car can run without these vital accessories, and indications are that along with most other civilian commodities they are going to be scarcer than ever. This is particularly true because so many critical materials, such as metals and rubber, are used in these products."

"That's why Mobilgas dealers are urging customers now to take full advantage of their tire and battery inspection service which helps make these accessories wear longer, and catches small defects before they disable the accessory completely."

"Particularly in the case of tires it is necessary to avoid the need for a new one. Proper inspection to keep foreign materials—such as nails, glass, tacks, etc.—out of the tread; occasional cross-switching and recapping before tires are too far gone, may mean the difference between the use of your car and having it laid up in the garage for weeks or months."

"This tire and battery inspection is a part of the Summer-proofing service which Mobilgas dealers are offering motorists at this time to guard against losing their transportation for weeks or months through breakdowns. Motorists are urged to take full advantage of it."
