been in the neighborhood of 80,000. The number REMAINING is a matter of prime interest, because experience indicates that we'll have that many yet to kill.

THE Tokyo radio has been muttering for days about an allied fleet that has "left the Marianas." It now adds nervously that this fleet is "steaming toward Japan."

It reports that Hirohito has mobilized 20 million Japanese students to "participate actively in the defense of their homeland" (probably the child grenade throwers it was talking about the other day).

When and how it will come is known only to our high command, but with the shooting war in Europe over the Japs are certainly due to learn something about the facts of life in a world where they are the LONE aggressors left on their feet.

THE Chinese claim to be spreading out from Poochow, taking several towns. Rumors persist that the Japs may be evacuating the China coast from Shanghai clear south to Hong Kong.

DISPATCHES from Europe suggest that the British and probably the Americans are trying to set up a decentralized German government and are looking for "worthy German burgoemeisters" (mayors). The British may even bring in some German refugees from London if they can't find any home-town Germans willing to tackle the job.

Obviously if we have to put our own men in as local officials in every German city, town and village we'll have a job on our hands. We're naturally trying to find some anti-Nazi Germans who are willing to tackle the rebuilding of Germany from the ground up.

History teaches us that COMPLETE foreign occupation, from local mayors, chiefs of police, etc., on up, builds bitter hatreds that tend to GROW rather than die out. We're apparently trying to avoid that mistake if we can.

THE Russians continue to pot-shot us about dickering with Doenitz, who seems to have some kind of German government in Flensburg, on the Danish border, and who appears not to have been arrested as yet.

Well, in the job we have ahead of us, it will be EASIER if we have SOME kind of German government to deal with. Dealing with 80 million INDIVIDUALS is an almost hopeless task.

The Russians go on prying us about why we don't start TRYING the war criminals. Maybe we have to CATCH a lot of them first. Admittedly, it would clear the air if we'd get the trials of those we've already caught under way, but we and the British just have to move more slowly in such matters. We aren't very good at shooting people against walls without a full trial.

Note that the French, whose minds work somewhat as ours do, haven't yet shot old Petain—or

UMPQUA STUDY PROPOSED

By Charles V. Stanton

We have been greatly impressed by the thoroughness of the report recently compiled by the Oregon State Game commission on the Rogue river. A similar study on all coastal streams would be of the greatest value in determining conservation measures to restock our streams with game and food fish, such study being needed in particular on the Umpqua river before destruction of fish life reaches the point where it becomes impossible to rebuild runs of migratory species.

Dr. Paul R. Needham, director of hatcheries and research, recently conducted a preliminary survey of the Umpqua river to determine whether a study similar to that made on the Rogue river is possible. His conclusions were that the study not only is possible, but can be made at moderate cost and with a high degree of efficiency.

The method used is exceedingly interesting. The first step would be to install counting stations at the Winchester dam. A white board would be placed on the bottom of one of the large pools in the fishways at the dam. Above this board would be built an observation station from which an observer could watch fish passing over the board and would tally them by species, keeping records of chinook and silver salmon, steelhead trout, cutthroat trout, etc. Observers would be kept on duty throughout all hours while fish were traveling, thus procuring a definite check on species of fish, hours of movement, effect of water conditions on travel, start, peak and close of seasons, etc.

In making a study of this type, the commission also traps a large number of each species of fish in the lower part of the river. A tag is attached to the dorsal fin. This tag does not injure the fish in any way, but, because of its visibility, permits the fish to be seen easily by an observer. Checks are then made of spawning beds and the number of tagged fish counted. Through proportions worked out at the counting station on the fishways, it would be possible to make an approximation of fish using each spawning bed, the relation of migration up the south fork of the Umpqua as compared with travel up the north fork, etc.

Continued over a period of several years, this study would give ample data upon which to base conservation measures. In addition studies would be made of food conditions, water chemicals, spawning areas, temperatures, stream flow, water diversion, and all other factors contributing to fish life.

The Game commission has been seriously handicapped in its survey work because much of its experienced personnel has been called into military service. But employees are beginning to return, and manpower for a study of the Umpqua river probably will be available in the near future.

The commission, however, will need to be convinced that there is a local desire for a Umpqua study before considering such a proposal. If there are others who believe as we do that a survey of the Umpqua river by the Game commission is desirable, we would suggest that you write the commission expressing your opinion and desires. If we can make sufficient showing of interest, it is possible that we, too, can obtain data similar to that now possessed by Rogue river interests as a basis upon which to conduct future development.

even Laval, whom they are supposed to have in their possession.

BRITISH newspapers are beginning to warn that some of the issues showing up in Europe are assuming the aspects of "international crises." There will be a lot of international crises before all the problems involved in the rehabilitation of Europe are settled. The solution of these problems will require infinite wisdom and patience (as well as grim firmness) if they are to be solved anything like RIGHT.

Most of us have high hopes that the Russian PEOPLE will ultimately turn out to be all right, but it would help a lot right now if the Kremlin would display a little more patience and understanding instead of constantly nagging at us and the British.

OF course we outsiders KNOW SO LITTLE. It would help SO MUCH if our own higher-ups would loosen up a little and tell us at least the rough outlines of what it is all about.

DIAL-LOG

By SUSAN

We could wish that every night of the week would turn up as Wednesday after a glance at the programming, because this is the night so fat and juicy with good shows that we practically don't over them. For instance, don't miss Brownstone Theatre at 6:30. They'll turn back the clock for you with the production of "Daddy Long Legs." Besides giving you a pleasant touch of nostalgia, you'll enjoy a good production with top-flight talent. Lone Ranger and Tonto at 7:30 and Main Line at 8:00. Willie Mather narrates this show. The Fresh-Up Show at 8:30, Newspaper of the Air at 9:00, Service Salute at 9:15, and the new Arch Oboler play at 9:30. Tonight's play is a satirical comedy of Hollywood, starring Lee J. Cobb, centers about the Hollywood agent and is titled "Mr. Ten Per Cent" at least that's what the latest publicity release said. If we have any fault to find with this production at all, it would be the number of times they change their minds about which play agent and on which dates. All well—they're all good, so why should we fuss about a little thing like that? Just be sure to be a listener, because it's sure to be good.

WASHINGTON, May 22—(AP)—The War Production board lifted its ban on lawn mower production today.

The three-year old prohibition on mowers of the hand, gang and power types was revoked effectively at once but mowers for civilians must be made of idle or surplus materials until July 1 when an unrestricted supply of steel will become available. Householders can expect only a few in 1945, WPA predicted.

DAILY DEVOTIONS DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

In all fields of life we need a consciousness of our objectives. "Quo Vadis" (whither goest thou) is not just the title of a novel. To know whither we go and are going, and getting there is an aching need. Philosophy, chemistry, agriculture maybe absorbing fields of service, but they should be only an avenue of approach that leads us to God. Ritual is a help to worship, but we must realize that it is only a means and not the end. The reality of sin. We can find reality of sin. We can find God only after we have been convinced of sin. To make worldly pleasures our dominating purpose is to lose a vision of God; to pursue selfish desires leads to spiritual dissolution. Our world today serves as a horrible example of what man in the mass will come to if he persistently refuses to recognize and serve God. Some day man will come to see that all his own ingenuity, philanthropy and international cordates are but sound and fury, signify nothing, without God dominant. We devise only vanities. "Earth gets its price for what earth gives us." Amen.

Bob Meredith, Ronald Meyer, Ruth Meyer, Virginia Mills, Stanley Mitchell, Keith Mobley, Frances Moore, Clifford Moran, Elva Jean Morgan, Elliott Mutschbacher.

Eight chairs will be empty, representing eight members of the class who will be awarded diplomas following call to military service. Among those now with the armed forces are Charles Carter, merchant marines; Leonard Draper, navy; Marvin Epps, army; Roy Knigge, air forces; Lawrence Powell, navy; Lenin Ramp, navy; Denton Talbert, air forces; Clifford Wandell, army; Jon Wilson, air forces.

LOW-DOWN THIEF TAKES FAMILY'S RED POINTS

Mrs. John Hill wouldn't have minded so much if her imitation pearl choker had been stolen... but her precious red points! The crime was revealed when she discovered that extra red points were going into the garbage can simply because she wasn't saving odd bits of fat, as well as the easy amounts from frying. Now she saves every scrap of fat trimmed off meat or left on plates. Once a week she melts it down, pours it into the salvage can. It adds up to more points for the Hill family. More fat to help make war- and home-front essentials. Hurrah!

Bull Calf Killing Practice Defended By Assn. Official

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22—(AP)—Dan McKinney, secretary of the California Cattleman's association, said today the practice of killing bull calves at birth was nothing new in California. He was discussing a Philadelphia radio commentator's report of it being done at Redding, Calif.

"Whether the bull calf is killed or kept a few months on milk to be sold as veal depends on which is worth most, the milk or the veal," McKinney said. "Right now, in the milk and butterfat shortage, it takes more milk to feed a calf to the veal stage than the veal is worth in some milksheds. It is probably more important in the Redding area of northern California for dairymen to get rid of milk-consuming bull calves now than before the war."

"Killing bull calves has little to do with the total meat supply. It destroys frames on which meat could be grown, but we have plenty of frames. Cattle numbers are at near-record figures. The milk subsidy may have some calf-killing influence. You don't get any subsidy on milk fed to calves."

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, May 22—(AP)—Dr. Clarence W. Lokoy, secretary of the board of home missions of the Methodist church, said plans are under way to build an $80,000 church here. The initial unit will be a youth center, following which the main structure will be rebuilt. It is to be equipped with a pipe organ—a rare instrument in Alaska.
