duction they are saying openly that loss of Okinawa will be well-nigh fatal.

But, in spite of all this, they AREN'T sending against us sufficient air power to DO THE JOB. That makes it fairly certain that they HAVEN'T GOT IT.

THERE is another interesting sign of a loose screw.

In a despotic, hard-boiled, mercilessly governed country such as Japan—where in an economy of cheapness, human life is the cheapest of all commodities—the suicide tactics of the Japanese land forces in the outlying islands is at least explainable on military grounds. It has two probable purposes:

1. To delay us as long as possible while preparations for defense go on at home.

2. To convince us that killing ALL the Japs is a longer and bloodier and more nauseating job than we care to go through with.

From the beginning, Japanese commanders have been reckless with their manpower—so reckless that they obviously have fixed in their minds the thought that there are "plenty more where these come from."

But AIR POWER is another matter.

IN a country as poor as Japan, there IS a limit to air power. We can build planes faster than the Japs can. We can keep it up longer. When the Japs start suicide fighting in the air they are courting disaster.

Suicide air attacks are too much like throwing your knife at an approaching enemy. If you catch him in the heart and finish him off, all is well. But if you MISS him you are left helpless.

There are certainly no signs that Jap suicide tactics in the air are hurting us more than we can bear. Throwing away planes and pilots in suicide attacks looks very much like PANIC on the part of the little yellow men.

Either that or very poor thinking.

NOTE, incidentally, that Suzuki CALLS IN HIS CABINET in this grave emergency. It's quite all right to be a DICTATOR when all is going well and the goose hangs comfortably high. But when disaster begins to loom it's pretty nice to have somebody to SHARE THE BLAME with.

THERE is a comforting note in the news. We are assured that a meeting of the Big Three (Truman, Churchill, Stalin) is coming up soon—maybe within the next three weeks.

It IS NEEDED. The world is full of suspicion. The Russians are clearly suspicious of us and the British. In spite of all our great admiration for their fighting qualities, we are beginning to be dubious about the Russians. If this suspicion THICKENS, instead of being dispelled, the consequences can be disastrous.

All business men know that when suspicion begins to spread to such an extent that it jeopardizes the successful completion of a deal that if carried through will mean profits for everybody concerned the thing to do is to get the PRINCIPALS together AROUND A TABLE. Nothing clears up suspicion like frank and open discussion face to face.

OUR HONORED DEAD

By Charles V. Stanton

Tomorrow we stop for a moment to review the terrible cost of war. Not the cost in dollars and cents, nor in destruction of property. We can pay the debt; we can find new materials with which to hide the scar of war's devastation. But nothing can restore life to those gallant men who have paid the price of war with their own blood; who lie today in graves in our own cemeteries or in foreign soil, or in the depths of the sea.

We have fresh cause for sorrow as we count the more than 300,000 dead and missing of our one million casualty list of the current war. To this heroic Legion of the Dead must be added the honor roll of those who have sacrificed their lives in the wars of the past. It is a mighty army.

Today we fight with guns, tanks, planes and ships to secure peace. But peace can never come until it finds its place in the hearts of men. If we could but see the ghostly hands of the Legion of the Dead held out in pleading for men to abolish war with its tragic toll of life, war would never again cast its shadow upon the world. Could we have held before us day-by-day, instead of once each year, the roll of our honored dead, our determination for peace would have been strengthened into action.

Great, though simple, words were spoken upon the field of Gettysburg by our martyred president, Abraham Lincoln, when he said:

It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion, that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain.

No words ever spoken by man are more applicable to today's need than Lincoln's appeal for peace.

Representatives of the peace-loving nations of the world are meeting in San Francisco in an attempt to arrive at a formula to prevent future wars that "these dead shall not have died in vain." The prayers of the world are with their efforts.

If the peace-loving majorities can produce a formula by which nations can live in harmony, with warmongers outlawed forever, then the dead will not have died in vain.

Each war of modern times has advanced civilization. This war, too, will, in many respects, offset its cost in lives and property by its contributions to human welfare, for the advances made in transportation, communication, medical science, production and organization will make this world a better place in which to live.

But its prime achievement may be that of permanent peace, for the world has been so shocked by the barbarity, treachery, torture and murder of this war that it has at last aroused itself to demand that wars shall be no more; to demand that nations which cause war shall be rendered impotent to again cast the plague of death and destruction upon those who seek to live in peace.

Crosses mark the graves of hundreds of thousands of our veterans in cemeteries throughout the world today. They are to be found upon the sands of the African desert, the beaches of France and Italy, upon the coral islands of the Pacific. Their number continues to grow. Above each mound the symbol of the Prince of Peace is reflected in some stricken home and in human hearts. It is not enough that we pay lip homage to those who have made the supreme sacrifice. It is not enough that we parade in their honor, cast flowers upon the waters, and sing psalms in their praise. We should and must, in their honor, determine that "these dead shall not have died in vain."

Two special block "R" letter awards were presented to Iris Herring and Audrey Mungler for work done on the annual.

Certificate "R" awards went to members of the student body council, home room chairman, school service club members, paper club editor, assistant editor, and art editor, "The Golden R" might be valuable.

If we can approach the future in that humble, simple, sensible spirit, there is literally NOTHING we can't accomplish. We can pay off our war debt. We can solve our social problems. If we'll all work together, each contributing whatever he has that is valuable to the common cause, each accepting gratefully the useful contributions of others, we can build the kind of world we all want to live in.

There are times when this man Truman seems too good to be true.

The world is girdled with graves of American boys who gave their lives in defense of democracy. Though we at home cannot decorate their resting places this Memorial Day, we can honor them in our hearts and work for them with our hands, the quicker to bring a victorious conclusion to the great battle they so bravely began.

DIAL-LOG

By SUSAN Tuesday night... and Music You Remember, 6:30; A Date With Annaloris, 8:00; Recital Hall of the Air, 8:30 (pupils of Miss Gladys Strong are guest artists this week); News, 9:00; Rex Miller, 9:15 and Chaplain Jim at 9:30. Speaking of Rex Miller, you'll be glad to know that beginning next Sunday evening at 9:15, you will be hearing him each week at that time.

Tomorrow, Memorial day, KRNR will be on a holiday schedule. That is you won't hear Shopper's Guide, Man About Town or the Wheel, but most of the other programs will be heard. Watch especially for the Brownstone Theatre of the Air at 6:30, presenting Neil Hamilton, guest-starring in "The Man Without a Country," and of Arch Oboler play, "Exercise in Horror," which the author describes as a "peculiar" comedy, and which will star Peter Lorre.

KRNR will also broadcast the Memorial day program from the Presbyterian church from 11:45 to 12:30 and then will bring you a complete news summary at 12:45. Other good bets for listening pleasure Wednesday include Main Line at 8:00 in the evening and the Fresh-Up Show at 8:30, now starring Bert Wheeler.

Planes to Dust Orchards To Slay Cherry Fly

THE DALLES, Ore., May 28.—(AP)—Airplanes will dust nearly 500 acres of this area's cherry orchards in June to combat the cherry fruit fly. Manager Allen Phillips said orchards here are not widely infested, but the pest is gaining a dangerous foothold. He stated the fly might have traveled here in boxes from Willamette valley canneries.
