Adm. Ota, naval base force commander, killed himself. His body, with throat slit, was found in an elaborate underground command post.

The Japanese were dying at the rate of 1,600 a day, said Adm. Nimitz announcing 12,756 had been slain in eight days, swelling to 80,459 the number killed since the invasion began April 1.

The estimated 8,000 to 12,000 Japanese still fighting were falling back behind "last-stand" ridge at the southern edge of the plateau.

One U. S. Ship Sunk

Over the weekend, the Japanese resumed kamikaze air attacks on American shipping in Okinawa waters. Adm. Nimitz's communique admitted one light unit was sunk Saturday.

In the center of the front, the 96th infantry division cut down with hand grenades 115 Japanese who tried to filter into the American lines in the dark early Sunday.

Nimitz said 80,459 Japanese had been killed since the Americans invaded the island April 1. Prisoners numbered 1,680 but they were coming in more slowly than front dispatches indicated a few days ago.

Last figure given for American ground force casualties was 5,332 soldiers and marines killed or missing, and 21,343 wounded as of May 24.

Japanese casualties do not include a large number of wounded who undoubtedly are behind enemy lines.

Luzon Finest Nears

U. S. Sixth army troops, spearheaded by the hard-driving 37th infantry division, were slamming rapidly northward on Luzon today in a bid for an early cleanup of weakening Japanese resistance. Gen. MacArthur announced that the Philippines campaign had cost the enemy 402,963 casualties in eight months.

Breakdown of the Japanese transport system under the relentless pounding of U. S. Fifth air force planes was given much of the credit for the fast advance down the Cagayan valley, where the last major concentration of Nipponese is holding out on northern Luzon.

The overall Japanese casualties announced by MacArthur were eight times those of the American ground forces, which a spokesman said were slightly in excess of 50,000 killed, wounded and missing, exclusive of air and naval forces.

CHUNGKING, June 18.—(AP)—The Chinese high command declared today its troops had driven to within 21 miles of strategic Luichow, rail center and former American air base, despite a Japanese counter-offensive and other strong enemy reaction.

tee that it had failed to do so. Gromyko, under instructions from Moscow, was unable to accept any compromise and could only report back to Moscow what was offered.

Confronted with a tight timetable which he intends to stick to if at all possible, Stettinius evidently hoped to avoid an open floor fight which might provoke lengthy debate and could end in defeat for Russia if the small nations lined up strongly behind Evatt. The next move was up to the executive committees.

Other Issues Hurdled

But the weekend brought a whirlwind cleanup of other controversies that had been argued out over many days past.

L. A. conference committee last night voted 23 to 3 (14 nations abstaining) to write into the charter authority for the proposed league either to expel or suspend members which violated its principles. The big powers had fought particularly for the expulsion clause.

This committee also approved 29 to 14 a Belgian plan that future amendments to the charter should become effective after being ratified by two-thirds of the united nations, including all the big five. This means that any one of the big five could veto an amendment by refusing to ratify it.

A committee voted 24 to 19 against writing into the charter a clause allowing any nation to withdraw its membership. The small nations had insisted on this right, but compromised on an informal committee statement which said that even without the express provision a nation could withdraw, particularly if some future change in the charter made it unacceptable to that nation.
