Staff Training For Boy Scouts' Camp Started

CAMP LUCKY BOY — Representing every section of the Trail council, Boy Scouts of America, is the staff for Camp Lucky Boy, summer training camp for Boy Scout troops now in operation.

Camp Lucky Boy which is operated for troops in Benton, Coos, Curry, Douglas, Lane and Lincoln counties, opens for a nine-week season on Sunday, June 24, at this Blue river site, 45 miles east of Eugene.

Directing the camp will be Judson W. Compton, field scout executive of the Oregon Trail council, with Ernest A. Seaton, newly selected field scout executive, as assistant camp director, Roger L. Bales, council scout executive, announced.

Dining hall staff is headed by Harold Jensen, Sr., scoutmaster of troop 5, Eugene, who will be cook. Assisting him are Dean McCorkle, cook's helper, and Bill Hardisty, head waiter, both from troop 6, Eugene. Camp clerk is Delos Young from troop 1, Corvallis.

The health tent will be in charge of C. A. Cummins, scoutmaster of troop 87, Siletz, with Lester Stephens of troop 87 as his assistant. The health and safety of Boy Scouts attending Camp Lucky Boy are guarded by the health staff, and every scout is given a physical recheck when he arrives at camp, Bales explained. A medical examination is also required before a scout comes to camp.

Adequate waterfront protection is afforded by the 1945 staff headed by Jack Cummings, assistant scoutmaster of troop 101, Eugene. Cummings will attend the Pacific Northwest aquatic school given by the national Boy Scout council, at Camp Cowles, which is near Spokane, from June 17 to 23. Assisting Cummings on the water front will be Kermit Chapman of troop 88, Glenwood, and Nelson Durbin of troop 31, Gardiner.

Handicraft Course Enlarged

An enlarged handicraft program, which will include archery, will be directed by Dr. H. W. Greene, with Ralph Jackson of Troop 3, Corvallis, and Albert Powers, Jr., of Troop 20, Coos Bay, assisting.

Actual practice of scouting skills will be a highlight of the Camp Lucky Boy program, and troops will be assisted in this field by Jack Graham of troop 30, Toledo, John Diehl of troop 10, Reedsport, and Bob Merriam of troop 101, Eugene. The hiking program for the camp, which includes three Middle Sister trips, and overnight hikes to Buck mountain and Carpenter mountain, will be directed by Charles Stevenson of troop 33, Coquille.

More than 50 Boy Scout troops will use Camp Lucky Boy this summer, Bales said, with over 650 scouts participating with their troops.

SURVIVAL BY SCARCITY

By Charles V. Stanton

Storm clouds have gathered again above the head of the OPA. Congress is debating whether the agency's life shall be extended for six months or for one year, with some sentiment in evidence for immediate execution. Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon has demanded the resignation of Price Administrator Chester Bowles. The congressional food study committee, of which Representative Harris Ellsworth of Oregon's Fourth district is executive secretary, is extremely critical of OPA's handling of the food situation. Congress is "up-in-arms" about the meat shortage, charging OPA bungling, and Senator Guy Cordon, back in his home state for a few days after concluding a series of hearings pertaining to grazing of cattle on public lands, is quoted as saying that "OPA couldn't have done a worse job if it had deliberately attempted sabotage." All of which recalls a remark made by a prominent Oregon resident, who, while visiting in Roseburg shortly after VE-day said, in effect, that instead of the war being half over we have won only one-third of the struggle, "for we still will have to lick the OPA."

But OPA doubtless will weather the current storm, just as it has survived hurricanes of like intensity in the past, for certain of its controls are essential if we are to avoid ruinous inflation. Despite numerous errors and blundering, OPA is performing a valuable service because continuation of controls is essential as long as there exists a scarcity of consumer goods and an overabundance of purchasing power.

The great danger, as we see it, lies in OPA's determination to survive as long as possible—not merely until the emergency has passed. Instead of releasing controls, when reason for them no longer exists, and surrendering authority as scarcities are eliminated, there is some reason to believe that OPA is deliberately creating scarcity to prolong its bureaucratic reign.

Meat provides one example. Even OPA admits more meat on the hoof than ever before. There are approximately 80,000,000 head of beef cattle in the country today—30,00,000 more than at any previous time in history. Yearling and spring lambs are being held by owners in every sheep-raising state because of OPA marketing interference. Yet restaurants in all major cities are closing because food is unobtainable to supply consumer demand.

OPA is bitterly assailing the public for lack of patriotism in patronizing a flourishing black market in meats. But the fact remains that enforcement can be maintained only so long as the majority of people agree as to the need for control. When popular opinion, which usually is right, rejects regulations, unlawful and undesirable practices arise. We saw that fact amply demonstrated in the break-down of prohibition. There is a vast difference in public acceptance of regulatory law as contrasted with criminal law. While people recognize the need for bag limits on fish and game, few feel like criminals if they break the law. No one would question the need for traffic laws, yet few motorists observe them in their entirety. So, despite OPA chiding, people generally will blithely patronize the black market when opportunity arises.

The OPA could destroy the black market on meat overnight by releasing control, for, with an abundant supply, the law of supply and demand, coupled with competition, would result in satisfactory distribution and reasonable prices.

But meat is not the only commodity on which shortages are chargeable to the OPA. The OPA discouraged sugar beet production. It recommended lower poultry production. Milk and butter shortages exist largely because of OPA restrictions. There is reason to believe that regulation of textiles has contributed to garment shortages.

Are these scarcities being deliberately created to prolong the life of the OPA? We're beginning to get suspicious that such is the case. If so, there should be no hesitancy on the part of congress to end such nefarious scheming without further delay.

Rent Control — How it Operates

(Editor's Note — This is one of a series of articles authorized by the Rent Control division of the OPA for the general information of landlords, tenants and owners of rental property. Specific information may be obtained at rent control board headquarters in the OPA office, Roseburg.)

With registration information at hand the rent control office determines the January 1, 1945, rent ceiling—which, incidentally, is not the same for all properties.

For example:

Where a dwelling was rented on the freeze date or immediately before, the rate then charged becomes the ceiling.

Where the property was first rented after the freeze date, the rate first charged becomes the ceiling. If, however, this rate is found, on inspection, to be above the level of "freeze date" rentals in the area for comparable accommodations, the OPA rent director has authority to reduce the rent to that level. The same arrangement holds in the case of dwellings increased or decreased in size since the freeze date, or changed from furnished to unfurnished or substantially improved between that date and January 1 of this year.

Where, in the case of first rental since the freeze date, it is necessary for the rent office to reduce the rate, no refunds back of May 1, 1945, will be ordered; but rents collected in excess of the established rate after that date are required to be returned to the tenants.

Rates charged on dwellings first rented hereafter will also be subject to review and, in the case of reductions, refunds of overcharges will have to be made unless the accomodation is registered within 30 days after the first tenant moves in. A copy of the registration goes to both landlord and tenant after examination at the rent office.

Beware of Inflated Rents On Coast, Visitors Told

PORTLAND, June 19—(AP)—Shore-bound vacationists had a warning today from district OPA to be careful of inflationary rentals at coast resort quarters.

The warning followed announcement by OPA Attorney Charles Kaufman that L. W. Hickey, proprietor of Vacation court, Seaside, had given the U. S. treasury $1290 collected as advance reservation deposits. Kaufman said the deposits were not applied to the rent later.

DIAL-LOG

By SUSAN

We understand that this is the last of the Recital Hall of the Air programs at 8:30 tonight. It's vacation time for the youngsters, too, but undoubtedly they will be back in the fall. Six-thirty tonight for Music You Remember, a Date With Annaloris at 8:00 and she tells us that she's including the new ballad "I Wuv A Wabbit" in tonight's musical line-up. News at 9:00, Rex Miller at 9:15 and Chaplain Jim at 9:30—and the program department is still dreaming about some new programs for Tuesday evening. Be of good cheer; we'll have something for you eventually. Aside from the good music, Tuesday evening is not overburdened with entertainment, but you can always read a good book and look forward to Wednesday. Vincent Lopez will be the Spotlight Band at 6:30. We either read or dreamed that Morton Downey would appear as guest.

In case you've been wondering about the new voice you are hearing, that is Del McKay. We needn't make a formal introduction this time since he is a home-town product, and you'll be hearing him regularly. There seems to be a dearth of gossip about the programs, or maybe it's the result of the first real summer day. Anyway we're signing off and going home to sprinkle the tomato plants.
