Washington News From an Inside View

Argument, Sentiment, Comment

By HARRIS ELLSWORTH
Congressman, Fourth Oregon District

OPA. The next problem to be faced by the house is the consideration of the extension of the Price Control Act (OPA). The senate has already acted on this legislation and incorporated in the bill both the cost of production amendments—the Wherry amendment prohibiting the setting of prices on farm products below the producers' cost of production, and a similar amendment authored by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, applying to meat processing and other manufactured food products.

I have attended some of the hearings held by the house banking and currency committee on this legislation. The stories of the abusive administration of the OPA act are enough to give the most hardened supporter of Chester Bowles, the OPA administrator, a severe chill.

As I have said before, the congress faces an impossible situation with reference to the OPA problem. Price control is necessary. The Price Control act is basically a good law. The difficulties, shortages and persecutions that have resulted stem from executive orders and administrative practices. We can incorporate a few more checks and safeguards against such mal-administration, but we cannot write administrative details into the law. The troubles with OPA are troubles born in the executive department of the government, and must finally be corrected there. President Truman will surely soon be compelled to overhaul the functioning of his price control agency.

Recess — Apparently most of the urgent business of congress can be finished by the end of this month. It is anticipated that a recess will be declared shortly after July 1st until after Labor day. I hope, therefore, to be able to spend half of July and all of August in Oregon.

Eisenhower Visit. I had the good fortune to spend some time with Gen. Eisenhower last fall in Paris, and know him to be a very unassuming man, and a person who obviously does not care for pomp and ceremony, such as welcomed him in Washington.

General Eisenhower is a great man and a great commanding general. His feat in leading our armies to a complete victory over Germany in exactly eleven months is the greatest military achievement in all history. There have been other great military victories, but none with operations conducted on such a vast scale or under more difficult conditions. Great as this achievement was, I think the fact that General Eisenhower was able to win victory with such a relatively small loss of men, considering the millions involved, is the thing for which he should be honored most. Victory at a high price is still victory, but victory as won by General Eisenhower and his armies with an absolute minimum loss of life is sweet indeed.

Methodist Contributions To Church Are Reported
SALEM, Ore., June 21—(AP)—Oregon Methodists contributed $899,537 to the church during the just-ended fiscal year—$341,347 more than in the previous year. The figures were presented by Ernest Purvance, Coquille, in his treasurer's report laid before the annual conference of the Oregon district today. The largest increase was $128,142, contributed to the postwar relief and rehabilitation fund. Only official members of the conference met here today, with the usual youth and women's sessions cancelled by war restrictions.

the FEED BAG

MEDICINE FOR TURKEYS.
We hear so much these days about "flushing" turkeys every so once in awhile. Some feed companies say to use their laxative or flushing mash every week, some every ten days, and so on, and on. The periodicals, talk of the greater need for physics because of the different methods of raising turkeys. And so it goes.

We hesitate to make any definite recommendation as to the if, when, and how often. We still see quite a number of the most successful turkey growers who consistently raise good turkeys, and never medicate them, unless they get sick and need it. And it is surprising how many seasons and how many flocks DO GET BY without it.

Other growers, just as successful, follow some system of more or less periodical flushing or physicizing their flocks, and they also raise good turkeys, and plenty of them. All of which, of course, proves exactly nothing. If one grower raises fine turkeys without laxatives, and another does the same with them, then it seems the only thing we can do is tell you to use your own judgment.

One thing we will definitely advise, however, is "don't go to extremes". We have seen many cases where physics and laxatives were used too strong and too long with disastrous results. "Too little too late" might be about the same as "Too strong too long".

If you want to flush your turkeys, you can feel reasonably certain they will not be hurt if you get our Lactose Milk Mash and feed it from five to eight hours, according to the age of the birds. This is a nutritional flush, and is not to be confused with harsh mineral purgatives. This excellent feed is actually selling at the Douglas County Flour Mill for only $4.30 per hundred.

MITES AND LICE.
This warm weather is going to be swell for haying, turkeys, corn, and many other things, but not for tempests. One thing that thrives in hot weather is chicken mites. They go through a complete generation in less than a week, and are they blood-suckers!! They can take the vitality out of a bunch of chicks, or good laying hens in a matter of days, if not hours.

They work at night, when hens are on the roosts, or on nests. They lower egg production rapidly, and fertility and hatchability suffer very soon. Starting with only a few mites, and doing nothing about them, you could be out of the chicken business in a couple months. But they can be controlled, and the damage practically eliminated. Carbolineum painted or sprayed according to directions is guaranteed to absolutely prevent mites for one whole year.

For a small investment, you can prevent your laying hens from being blood donors, prevent an early slump in your production due to mites, and prevent yourself a huge amount of discomfort in husing mites off your hands and arms, and out of your hair. At the Mill, we have carbolineum in gallon containers, ready for you to take out and use. Don't fight mites all year; knock them out with a single treatment, and save both time and money.

MILO MAIZE.
We are frequently asked what those small round seeds are in Umpqua Scratch these days. Looks something like an overgrown radish seed, but isn't. Well, that is milo maize, a very good feed, and used very extensively for feeding all kinds of livestock and poultry in other sections.

Chemically it is very close to corn and wheat in feeding value, and it is an exceptional case when birds don't take to it very quickly. It is actually more digestible than even corn.

WHAT ABOUT ROOSTERS?
The quickest cheap and easy way to improve your poultry flocks is to get good roosters every year. Many folks this year bought either eggs or baby chicks from good flocks from which they will get this year's males. If you didn't do this, get in touch with somebody right now who has good birds.

About the time pullets begin laying in the fall, many people scurry around looking for some good roosters. Usually by that time, the best of every flock has decorated some dinner table, and we have to take whatever we can find of the culls. Result—flocks just don't improve. Don't delay.

FRESH AIR.
Maybe you get tired being asked to give your turkeys more air. But if you could see everything we see, you could understand why we continue to harp on it. The best turkey flocks we have seen are the flocks that were put outside to roost at six or seven weeks.

If the weather is bad, you could put a shelter over them to keep the rain off. But at six weeks, turkeys SHOULD BE READY for outside roosting. We have seen several flocks that have roosted out without cover for the past month, and they look swell. Why not get over the idea that they are so delicate? They are not, unless we make them that way.

Friend: "How long did you know your wife before you married her?"
Husband: "Are you kidding? After forty years I still don't know her."

WANTED: All feed contracts to be signed soon. After July 1st, we can't promise anything.

BEWARE.
Only a few more days to get a dime for your good used Umpqua Brand sacks.
