DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

Like the Prodigal Son, all of us want to live our own lives. In reality, all of us have to live our own lives, though there are limits to our independence. Generally speaking, when a person insists "I have to live my own life," he is making an excuse for doing what he knows he should not do. Such people fail to see that those who live on a high plane of Christian living are also living their own lives. Modern prodigals, like the Prodigal Son, choose to live on a low level. On the other hand, people, who do great things are often people in revolt. Moses rebelled against the case of Pharaoh's Court. Florence Nightingale revolted against the convention that kept women from serving as nurses. Jesus would not be bound by a religion that was formal and proud. The high road of life is filled with men and women who have revolted against a life of sin and selfishness or ease. But their revolt has been upward to higher and better things. "But to every man there openeth a high way and a low, and every man decideth the way his soul shall go."—Amen.
