Vets' Request for Farms Needs Up to AAA Committees

County AAA committees will handle veterans' applications for the purchase of surplus war property for agricultural purposes under a Surplus Property board regulation which went into effect July 1, according to Leo Sparks, chairman of the Douglas county committee.

The regulation gives veterans of this war the right to buy up to $2,500 worth of surplus property for use in business or agriculture. For property to be used in farming, veterans will apply to the AAA committee in the county in which the farm is located. After AAA review and certification, the applications will be sent to the Portland office of Small War Plants corporation, which will locate the property and sell it to the veteran.

To purchase property for use in business or professional enterprises, veterans will apply direct to the Smaller War Plants office in Portland.

Any available item of surplus property may be purchased except real estate, aircraft, plants and facilities, and any type of property which is to be resold by the purchaser without reprocessing. Eligibility requirements for purchases include the following:

The total capital investment in the farm cannot exceed $25,000, in which the veteran has at least a 50 per cent interest. All of the property to be purchased is useful to the operation of the farm, and the success of the farming enterprise is reasonably probable.

The regulation defines a veteran as a person who has served in the military or naval service since September 16, 1940, and prior to the end of the war and who has an honorable discharge. The price of the property to the veteran cannot exceed the cost to the government, less appropriate allowances for depreciation, obsolescence, wear and tear, and similar factors relating to its condition and usefulness.

DIAL-LOG

BY SUSAN

Step right up, folks, settle down in the easy chair and dial 1490 for the premiere of "The Adventures of Nero Wolfe," the latest in the whodunit field to take to the air. We're looking forward to it, because the Nero Wolfe stories are a cut above the average and consequently we're expecting this show to shine brightly. Other good listening times tonight: Music You Remember, 6:15; A Date with Annaloris, 8:00; and your latest "Snapshot in the Local Frame" at 8:30. Remember, too, that on Tuesday night you hear Rex Miller at 9:15. Speaking of news commentators, Cedric Foster is back in this country after a tour of the Pacific theater. He's the gentleman, you know, who sounds so very erudite, but just the same he's one of our favorite newsmen even though he has the most fantastic mustache you could imagine. Since we're on the subject of news commentators, you may confidently expect some big news to break any time between July 30 and the middle of August, because Fulton Lewis, Jr., is leaving on a vacation and he always picks the times when the big stories break to take off on a trip. The result, of course, is that he has to cut his vacation short and dash back to work. One other item: If you've gotten behind on Superman this is a good night to start listening again, because he starts off on a new series of adventures that bid fair to outshine anything he's done to date. Once again, this is the night for Snapshots and the Adventures of Nero Wolfe. Tune in, won't you?

Restrictions Lifted on Small Crawler Tractors

Brighter prospects for an early improvement in the supply of crawler tractors for Oregon farmers are seen in the recent WPB action removing distribution controls on two types of crawlers. The two models now free of restrictions on purchase are the Cletrac HG and Lindeman-John Deere BO crawlers. Farmers now may buy these 20-horsepower tractors without a certificate of priority of any kind if they can find one.

All other types of crawlers remain under quota, with AAA committee recommendation and WPB approval needed to buy one.

Early Spring Purchases Of Proteins Is Advised

AAA committeemen have been asked to advise ranchers and stockmen to act now to get the supplies of protein feeds they will need next winter. With the acute transportation situation, late stocking up on protein is a good way of asking for trouble next winter, it is pointed out. Another reason for early ordering is the possibility that protein meal may be tight from supply as well as distribution standpoint, as there are a lot of livestock and poultry to feed.

Hens Respond to War Needs With Good Output

With fewer hens on farms, June egg production was only 3 percent below the record June 1944 production. The rate of lay was 15.6 eggs—a June record—compared with 14.6 eggs for the 10-year average (1934-43) for the month. Egg output for the first half of 1945 is now only 6 percent below last year's record pace.
